

Pilferers Take About Anything

By LIANE GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Those who smuggle extra food or silverware out of local restaurants may be biting the hands that feed them.

Restaurant managers in Lincoln say their customers are walking off with "just about everything that isn't bolted down" — crackers, butter, sugar, salt and pepper shakers, ashtrays, silverware, dishes. . . .

Although many managers are still smiling and joking about it, many said they want customers to realize they're making up for losses when they pay the tab.

Pilfering Up 20%
Phil Ontiveros, manager trainee at Denny's Restaurant said he noticed about a 20% rise in pilfering this summer.

"It seems like every week we have to go out and buy new spoons, forks and condiment holders," he said. "There's no way to control it."

"I mean you can't really ask people at the cash register if they have any silverware in their pockets. We just about have to grin and bear it."

Ontiveros recalled a recent incident involving a young hitchhiker who stopped in for coffee and a roll.

"After he left, we went over to clean up and found he'd already done it for us. He walked off with the whole little setting — platter, coffee cup and silverware."

Way To Advertise
Ontiveros said he expects ashtrays to disappear. And since they carry Denny's trademark, it's a cheap, effective way to advertise, he said.

Betty Rodgers at Lums said she notices more people stealing packets of granulated sugar from condiment racks on tables.

"We just don't keep as much of it out anymore," she said. "People, mostly students, were taking it by the handfuls. I guess I can't blame them really. Not with the price of sugar like it is."

The manager of a hotel restaurant, who asked to remain anonymous, said his biggest headache is his room service customers.

"Anything you take up to the rooms you'll probably never see again," he said. "We've been thinking about switching to paper plates and plastic spoons, but that's not too classy, is it?"

Especially The Elderly
Sharon Schroeder, manager of Alice Restaurant, said she has noticed people, especially the elderly, are pocketing more sugar and cream packets these days.

"I imagine it's the only way some of those people on Social Security can make it," she reasoned. "I feel like we're helping supply their staples."

At King's Food Host on 48th and O streets, Mark VanHorn said "customers will walk off with just about anything you put on the table."

"One day we had to go out and frisk a busload of teen-agers," he said. "We came up with several handfuls of salt and pepper shakers."

VanHorn listed the three "hottest" items as sugar, silverware and ashtrays.

'People Will Be People'
Sivert Haddal, manager of the University Club Restaurant pointed out that he serves a more well-to-do clientele, "but people will be people, you know."

"We do lose silver and such," he said, "but it's hard to tell if someone stole it or if it fell in the garbage can."

"I don't know why people like that take things," he said. "It must be some kind of a mania. I guess they feel they're beating the game."

Haddal said he once visited the mountain retreat of a wealthy friend and was astounded to see every towel had the name of a different hotel on it. The same went for ashtrays, silverware and napkins.

"He was very methodological about it all, though," Haddal said. "He didn't have two from the same place."

"I suppose richer people have more opportunity to collect a bigger variety. The rest of us have to settle for local stuff."

Shortages Slowing Relief

Honduran Deaths Could Hit 10,000

SAN PEDRO SULA, Honduras (AP) — A shortage of aircraft and fuel slowed down relief efforts Sunday along the flooded northern coast of Honduras, where Hurricane Fifi left thousands dead and where many survivors still clung to trees and rooftops.

Dazed Hondurans wandered along washed-out roads or dug through piles of debris searching for friends and relatives who disappeared during the storm. Fifi swept through the region four days earlier with sustained winds of 110 miles an hour and gusts up to 130 m.p.h.

Government officials said they have confirmed finding at least 5,000 bodies. They estimated that the death toll may double that before rescue operations are completed.

U.S. Ambassador to Honduras Phillip V. Sanchez reported there are no Americans believed missing. He said he knew nothing about reports that some 70 Peace Corps volunteers had been in the area where the storm hit.

Fifi, downgraded to a tropical storm, continued to blow itself out against the mountains of Chiapas in southern Mexico, spreading heavy rains through the area. Eleven Mexicans were reported dead.

The storm and flooding washed out complete towns and villages along the Honduran coast. Lt. Col. Muaro Flores Perifin of the Honduran National Emergency Committee operations," the officer said. "We need helicopters desperately."

Another officer said, "It is an unbelievable disaster. We need fuel and aircraft soon, or we will lose thousands more stranded on rooftops and in trees."

Floodwaters turned the Ulua River valley from San Pedro Sula to the coast into a 20-mile-wide lake at some points. Only tree tops and hills were safe from the water that was pushed back into the valley by 12-foot tides during the storm.

An emergency committee official said at least 80% of the banana, sugar cane and bean crops were destroyed. He estimated that at least 75% of the homes and 90% of the roads in the hard-hit northwestern sector of Honduras were destroyed by the floods.

SURVIVOR . . . says he was carried a great distance by raging floodwaters.

493 To Get Tax Warrants

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

Lancaster County's largest taxpayer, The Lincoln Telephone and Telegraph Co. (LT&T) is among the 493 taxpayers being sent distress warrants for delinquent personal property taxes.

LT&T owes the county $565,058 in delinquent personal property taxes for 1973 plus interest.

The utility firm has filed suits in Lancaster and 14 other southeastern Nebraska counties seeking a reduction in the assessed value of phone company property on the contention that real estate is not being assessed at the 35% statutory level at which personal property is assessed.

Litigation Pending

Although LT&T has tendered to the county a check for $193,600.58 plus $2,906.36 interest, the county has not accepted it as payment for delinquent taxes until after a court determination in the pending litigation.

According to the Lancaster County Treasurer's office, 493 warrants are being issued this year for a total of $736,952.54 in delinquent taxes for 1973 and prior years.

Each year, the treasurer's office sends out a notice in April as a reminder that the first half of the prior year's taxes which were delinquent in December has not been paid; in July a courtesy notice is sent out concerning the second half which became delinquent in June.

In August, a final notice prior to issuance of a distress warrant is mailed out to the delinquent personal property taxpayers, and if this brings no results, a distress warrant is issued Oct. 1 — nearly a year after the first half of the tax was delinquent.

Serious Problem

Lancaster County Deputy Sheriff Roy Ostrander, who handles the collection of delinquent taxes on distress warrants for the county, notes that this time lag is a serious problem in collection of the taxes.

He notes that assessment day is Jan. 1 of each year and by the time a distress warrant is issued those taxes have been due about 20 months and the first half delinquent practically a year.

He said the sheriff's office has nine months in which to try to collect on a distress warrant before it must be returned.

Because of this time lag, Ostrander said a distress warrant may be issued for $20,000 in delinquent taxes but the taxpayer may have accumulated $60,000 in delinquent taxes by the time the sheriff may levy on the property but he may levy on only the $20,000 for which the distress warrant has been issued.

Some Impossible

Ostrander also points out that many times the taxpayers have moved out of town or out of the state, the firm may be bankrupt or it may not have sufficient personal property on which to levy which makes it impossible to collect.

Another problem cited by Ostrander is the statutory 9% rate of interest counties are allowed to charge for delinquent taxes.

With the high cost of borrowing money today, Ostrander says many individuals and corporations prefer to pay the 9% without any collateral for interest on delinquent taxes than to pay the higher rate at lending institutions plus being required to furnish collateral.

The 9% rate is oftentimes insufficient to pay the costs involved in trying to collect the taxes, Ostrander states.

$631,620 Collected

Between October, 1970, and June 30, 1974, the sheriff's office collected $631,620 in delinquent personal property tax on distress warrants.

According to the 1972 report, 566 warrants were issued for a total of $225,398.63 and $156,326.80 was paid in full on 389 warrants.

Of the 517 warrants actually worked for that year, 115 were returned unsatisfied or uncollectable in that nine-month period.

To effect a levy, Ostrander explained, the sheriff must find property for which tax is due which creates problems.

In the case of boats, which are the bulk of delinquent personal property taxes owed by individuals, Ostrander points out that the boat may be sold by the time the distress warrant is issued and then it is difficult to locate the property.

Amount Of Taxes Owed Varies Greatly In County

A check of the 1973 delinquent tax list, for which warrants are being issued, revealed a wide variance in amounts owed.

The amounts vary from 46 cents owed by one individual up to the $565,058 plus interest owed by the Lincoln Telephone and Telegraph Co.

Several businesses show delinquent personal property taxes of more than $1,000 with some reaching the $5,000 and $6,000 mark.

The majority of the businesses owe less than $300 with many delinquent tax bills falling under the $100 mark.

He noted that people purchasing boats from previous owners should check to make sure no back personal property taxes are owed on it because the tax remains with the property, regardless of the ownership.

He said an individual could be forced to lose a boat for delinquent taxes which may have been owed on it at the time of purchase.

Most of the delinquent taxes are settled before the sale date of confiscated property, he said.

However, the public auction sale of property for delinquent taxes presents another problem, according to Ostrander.

If the property does not bring sufficient money to cover the delinquent taxes and costs, the counties have no recourse but to accept what it receives, he notes.

One Law Not Utilized

Ostrander said that there is one law which to his knowledge the county has not utilized in the handling of delinquent personal property taxes.

The law provides that an officer or agent of a corporation, which has been notified by the county treasurer of the amount of its delinquent taxes, must pay over to the county treasurer all the money belonging to that corporation which he may have in his hands or which may come into his hands.

Failure to comply, according to provisions of the law, makes the agent or officer guilty of a misdemeanor and subject, upon conviction, to a fine of not less than $50 nor more than $500.

for homes located on leased land which are taxed as personal property.

According to sources, many of the property owners around the Capitol Beach Lake area, are not paying their personal property taxes on their homes because they are challenging the homestead exemption provision.

Because these homes located on leased land are taxed as personal property and not as real estate like other homes, there is no provision for them to qualify for the homestead exemption on the owner-occupied residence.

Jordan Pledges Boycott Of All Settlement Efforts

By The Associated Press

Jordan said Sunday it will boycott all collective Arab efforts to achieve a political settlement with Israel and vowed to stay out of the projected Arab-Israeli peace talks in Geneva.

But a government spokesman in Amman described the decision as temporary and indicated Jordan could reverse it when the Arab summit conference convenes in Morocco on Oct. 28.

Jordan's move came as Israeli newspapers urged a campaign against the presence of Palestine Liberation Organization delegates at the United Nations, and as Egyptian President Anwar Sadat warned if a new Middle East war breaks out Egypt will not accept a ceasefire "until every Israeli soldier has left Arab lands."

Jordan's move reflected a rejection of an agreement announced Saturday in Cairo that an independent national authority would be established on Palestinian lands freed from Israeli occupation.

The Cairo agreement, between Egypt, Syria and the Palestine Liberation Organization, indicated for the first time that the PLO might accept a political solution to the Middle East conflict.

The agreement appeared to diminish the planned role of King Hussein in any prospective meetings with Israeli negotiators toward a settlement.

It also seemed to pave the way for the PLO to take over control of the West Bank of Jordan, the Gaza Strip and East Jerusalem if vacated by Israel.

The West Bank and the Arab sector of the holy city had been under Hussein's control after the 1948 war, but Israeli forces captured them in the 1967 war.

"The government will as of today freeze its political activities connected with the Geneva conference," Jordan said, adding it has thus "frozen" its earlier acceptance of invitations by the U.S. and Soviet governments to attend the Geneva talks.

The decision was communicated to Washington and Moscow earlier in the day, a statement said.

It said Jordan insists on retrieving occupied lands first, including the Arab sector of Jerusalem, then the Palestinian population of the country would be permitted to determine its own destiny in a neutral and internationally supervised plebiscite.

Jordan emphasized it should go it alone as far as negotiations for a settlement with Israel are concerned.

It also warned the Arab states that Jordan might "relinquish its role" in liberating the occupied lands if the Morocco summit conference endorsed the Cairo agreement.

This would pose a serious dilemma for the Arab states which have yet to achieve a combined position over the Jordan-Palestinian rift regarding Geneva.

It is generally accepted that Hussein, with his moderate policy, stands a better chance of reaching a settlement with Israel than would PLO chief Yasser Arafat. But the Palestinians dismiss this and insist on tackling the problem in their own way.

The Palestinians have apparently abandoned their traditional advocacy of "armed struggle until all occupied lands are liberated." Instead, the Cairo agreement reflected their willingness to talk peace with Israel rather than wage war, at least for the foreseeable future.

The Israeli newspaper Haaretz said Israel should not be deterred from campaigning to persuade as many U.N. members as possible to "express reservations against any draft resolution backing inclusion of the Palestinian issue on the agenda."

"Israel has a special interest in the American administration instructing their delegate to voice such reservation by way of a negative vote and not make do merely with abstaining."

Deserters Will Find Military's Red Tape

Camp Atterbury, Ind. (AP) — Deserters who want to participate in President Ford's conditional clemency program will find themselves back under the military red tape they fled.

At Camp Atterbury, the central processing point for those who choose to seek clemency, they will be hustled constantly from one station to another in an around-the-clock operation that will provide few idle hours.

"We're going to run this like a mill," says Col. Leonard Reed, the public affairs officer for the program. "It will be efficient and effective processing."

The first 27 to turn themselves in were processed at Fort Benjamin Harrison in Indianapolis. But officials say the operation was shifted to this former World War II and Korean War training post because of projections that many more will arrive in the next few weeks.

A Ft. Harrison spokesman said a group of 75 Army deserters would arrive at Indianapolis' Weir Cook Airport Monday afternoon and would be brought here by bus. The spokesman said he did not know where the men would come from or how they were assembled.

The processing is expected to take about four days for each man. There will be no incarceration. Men will be free to come and go as their schedules permit.

As soon as participants report, their records will be checked to guarantee they are eligible for the program. They will then receive physical examinations and legal counseling. Financial records will be checked to determine if deserters are due back pay from the point they entered service until the time of desertion.

Before leaving here, participants must sign loyalty oaths and will then be issued undesirable discharges. At the completion of two years of alternate service, the discharges may be changed to clemency discharges.

By the time a man completes processing, the Joint Alternative Service Board at Fort Harrison probably will have made a decision on his case, and he will know the amount of alternative service he is required to complete.

Hospital Readied For Nixon

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Flowers, telegrams and get well cards began arriving Sunday at the hospital where former President Richard M. Nixon is scheduled to become a patient for treatment of his phlebitis.

Nixon was to enter Memorial Hospital Medical Center in this seafaring industrial city Monday for at least three days of care, after weeks of speculation on the state of his health.

Varying reports have circulated about Nixon's physical and mental condition since he resigned the presidency Aug. 9. His former White House physician once told an interviewer that Nixon had refused to heed a recommendation several weeks earlier to be hospitalized because he feared "if I go into the hospital, I will never come out alive."

That reported statement was later explained by Nixon spokesmen as meaning the former president thought it necessary to his good health not to be confined to a hospital. Spokesmen, asked about the length of his hospitalization, say only that it will be at least three days.

Grace Hollenbeck, nursing manager on the sixth floor of the hospital — where Nixon's room is prepared — said bouquets of fall flowers featuring bright yellow chrysanthemums had arrived for the former chief executive, but she did not know who the well-wishers were.

She said the floral tributes would be given to either the Nixon family or the Secret Service to be presented to the ailing former president when he arrives for treatment of phlebitis in his left leg, which doctors say is painfully swollen.

Hospital spokeswoman Karen Krantz said a few get well cards and telegrams had begun dribbling in, and callers with messages for Nixon had been lighting up the switchboard all weekend.

Some of the calls expressed genuine good wishes, she said, but there were a few from pranksters which didn't seem to make much sense.

The hospital had not received any messages from the White House, she said. Nixon's care will include anticoagulant treatments for his phlebitis, a disease in which blood clots cause swelling of the veins. Doctors say two blood clots have formed above Nixon's left knee and either could be fatal if it broke loose and lodged in his heart or lungs.

Medication in such treatments must first be given intravenously and later can be taken orally. The treatment also includes elevation of what doctors say is his painfully swollen leg.

It was not known what time the former chief executive planned to enter Memorial Hospital, located about 50 miles north of the San Clemente estate where he has remained most of the time since leaving the White House.

SUSANN... publishing phenomenon dies.

Actress Turned Author Loses Fight With Cancer

New York (AP) — Jacqueline Susann, whose "Valley of the Dolls" was one of the best-selling novels in publishing history, died Saturday night in Doctors Hospital of the cancer she had been fighting throughout her writing career. She was 53.

A successful actress who retired in 1963 for a writing career, Miss Susann's novels contained sexy dialogue and portrayed lust and power among the mighty of society.

All her writing, whose pungent style earned her three straight number one best sellers, was done after 1962, when she contracted cancer.

Miss Susann became a publishing phenomenon in 1966 when her first major attempt at a novel, "Valley of the Dolls," rocketed to the top of the best-seller lists and stayed there for 28 weeks. It currently is in its 55th paperback printing and has sold more than 17 million copies.

The novel described actresses who in their insecurity turn to pills — or "dolls" — to put them to sleep, pills to wake them and pills to keep them slim.

"Dolls" and her second best-seller, "The Love Machine," published in 1969, were both made into movies and turned out to be major box office attractions.

Her third straight best-seller was "Once is Not Enough," published in 1973.

The outgoing Miss Susann, who promoted her books on television talk shows and in numerous barnstorming tours, once told an interviewer, "I sell because of what I write, not because I'm wrapped up in a package and tied with a ribbon."

Critic Rex Reed once called her "the Wonder Woman of the publishing world."

She was often attacked by critics for writing what they called trash. But she replied:

"A good writer is one who produces books that people read — who communicate. So if I'm selling millions, I'm good."

Among her other works was "Every Night, Josephine!" her first published work and the nonfiction book she credited as marking her "birth" as a writer. She often described "Josephine!" published in 1963, as the story of her life with her movie producer-husband, Irving Mansfield, and Josephine — "the poodle who owned us."

Miss Susann's approach to writing was unique in the publishing world. She would first select a theme, main characters and an ending, then develop other characters and incidents as she wrote. A blackboard stood in her den studio and was used to chart the evolution of her characters. She would write four or five drafts, each on a different color of paper — first on yellow, then on pink, followed by blue and finally white.

The result was novels heavy with dialogue and short chapters that seemed to move with jet-speed. Her characters often appeared similar to real-life personalities, but she repeatedly insisted that all of her characters were fictional composites.

During her career as an actress, Miss Susann appeared in 21 Broadway plays and radio shows, including "Banjo Eyes," "Jackpot," and "Watch on the Rhine."

In the 1950's, she turned to television, appearing as a dramatic actress, game show panelist and master-of-ceremonies on several interview programs. She returned to the stage in 1970 in an off-Broadway revival of "The Mad Woman of Chaillot."

Miss Susann was born in Philadelphia, the daughter of portrait painter Robert Susann, whose subjects included author Booth Tarkington, Cardinal Dougherty and sportsman-industrialist John Kelly, father of Princess Grace of Monaco.

She is survived by Mansfield, her husband of 30 years; their son, Guy, and her mother, Rose Susann of Philadelphia.

Funeral services will be private.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy

Kennedy May Tell His Plans

Boston (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., will hold a news conference Monday to announce his future political plans, his office said Sunday. A spokesman said it is presumed he will be talking about whether he will run for president in 1976.

A Kennedy spokesman said the senator will hold a news conference at 9:30 a.m. CDT to discuss his future political plans.

When asked if the announcement concerned a possible campaign for the presidency in 1976, the spokesman said, "You can presume that is what he'll be talking about."

Kennedy had said during a trip to California last weekend that he would announce before the end of the year whether he will seek the office held by his brother, John F. Kennedy, and sought by his brother, Sen. Robert F. Kennedy of New York.

Swimming Pool For Ford Planned

Washington (AP) — Construction of a new White House swimming pool is scheduled to start about Oct. 1 so it can be completed for President Ford to use by the end of the year.

Presidential counsel William E. Casselman, who is helping with the project, said the pool will cost an estimated $300,000, which will be paid for by a public fund-raising drive.

But instead of waiting until the money is raised, the project will be started with money from a commercial loan or some other temporary financial arrangement.

The National Park Service, which is in charge of keeping up the White House grounds, is making the final decisions on the plans for the pool, which will be located just behind the President's Oval Office where the dog kennels have been located. The site is on the west side of the south lawn of the White House.

Ever since Ford moved out of his Alexandria, Va., home, where he liked to exercise daily in a backyard swimming pool, there has been growing sentiment for getting a swimming pool at the White House again.

Former President Nixon had a press room built over the old inside swimming pool, which had been installed in the days of Franklin Roosevelt's presidency.

A public fund-raising drive then provided the money for a pool for Roosevelt, who had been stricken with polio and required the pool for therapeutic and exercise purposes.

Casselmann said that it is expected there will be some limitation placed on the amount of money that any single individual or group could donate so that there will be no possibility of anyone saying that they built the pool for the White House.

The fund-raising will be done through the private, non-profit National Park Foundation that was organized years ago to accept and administer gifts of any nature for the benefit of the National Park Service.

Casselmann said that any excess money raised after the project is completed will be donated to aid U.S. Olympic teams.

President Ford has been getting along pretty well so far without his swimming pool. He reported this past week that he has lost some 14 pounds in the last two months and has only about two more to go to reach the weight of 195 pounds that his doctor has suggested for him.

Ford said he is riding a stationary bike set up in his bedroom and has been doing sit-up exercises to keep fit. "It's not very exciting," the President said of his present exercise pattern.

He had been used to swimming about 35 to 40 laps a day in his 40-foot-long swimming pool, usually going in for a swim in the morning and in the evening.

96 Injured In Blast At SP Railroad Yard

Houston (AP) — Officials said Sunday the fire from an explosion that rocked the Southern Pacific Railroad yard and sent nearly 100 persons to hospital emergency rooms this weekend may continue to smolder for several days.

Many of the estimated 3,000 people evacuated from the area after Saturday's explosion returned to their homes Sunday as investigators attempted to determine the cause of the blast.

Most of the 96 persons treated at six hospitals Saturday suffered minor injuries from flying glass. Three firefighters were among about 20 persons hospitalized. One of the injured — Southern Pacific engineer James McKnight, 56 — was in critical condition with burns over 99 per cent of his body.

A fire department spokesman said Sunday that at least one person known to have been in the area had not been accounted for.

Windows were shattered in buildings far from the site — more than four miles of track in northeast Houston where freight trains are switched, loaded and put together.

Southern Pacific officials said they believed the blast occurred while two Shell Chemical Co. cars loaded with butadiene, a gas used in the manufacture of synthetic rubber, were being coupled for transport to a Lake Charles, La., plant.

Paul Carr, a fire department spokesman, said the explosion did not affect several cars which were loaded with military missiles and were in another part of the yard.

N.Y. Times Summary

Nuclear Stockpile Studied

Washington — The Defense Department is studying whether to reduce the large stockpile of nuclear weapons stationed in western Europe. The assumption among senior officials, including Secretary of Defense James R. Schlesinger, is that the study will conclude that on strictly military grounds some of the nuclear weapons should be and can be withdrawn. The problem, however, is regarded as more political than military.

Kissinger To Propose 'Incentives'

New York — State Department officials said Secretary of State Kissinger plans to propose some new "incentives" in a major address to the United Nations General Assembly Monday morning on food, oil and nuclear problems. He is also scheduled to hold meetings with Greek and Turkish officials on the Cyprus crisis while he is in New York.

Car Repairs No Savings

New York — Automobile owners, discouraged by the prices of new cars, who are trying to squeeze more mileage from their old cars are finding that the cost of repairs has jumped 10% to 25% or more this year. In Manhattan, the owner of a garage estimates that repair and service costs have gone up as much as 50% in the past year. Nationally, the Bureau of Labor Statistics finds automobile maintenance costs in August were 11.3% higher than a year earlier. Enrollment in adult-education classes in car repairs is growing in many cities.

Amnesty Plan Boycott Planned

Toronto — A group of Americans here spent the weekend planning a boycott of President Ford's conditional amnesty program for draft dodgers and deserters who have sought refuge in Canada and other countries. About 50 young men, speaking for the American-exile organizations in Canada as well as in France, Britain and Sweden were unanimous in condemning the President's offer of amnesty in exchange for periods of public service work in the United States.

Ford Aide Indictment Urged

Washington — Justice Department lawyers investigating a tax fraud case reportedly recommended the government seek an indictment on income tax evasion by Benton L. Becker, a Washington lawyer and an aide to President Ford, a month before he was sent to California by the White House as its intermediary in Ford's pardon for former President Nixon.

Farm To Be Showcase For Good Conservation

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Lancaster County residents are being offered a new opportunity to view the Soil Conservation Service land and water saving efforts under construction on a farm near the Waverly exit ramp from I-80.

The farm is just a little over a mile south of the John Deere farm equipment shop between the Interstate and Waverly.

The owners of the farm, Mrs. Goldia Rees and Mrs. Sylvia Miller, have offered to let people come onto the land to inspect the terrace system and waterway now under construction.

Long-Time Advocates

Ross Miller, who manages the land for the owners, said, "We have been advocates of good soil conservation programs for many years. This land will be here 200 years from now, and we intend to preserve it."

Miller notes that good soil conservation practices preserve land and are also profitable. "We haven't been losing money on this farm, and we sure don't intend to lose any. We are gambling that this will be a profitable move as well as good conservation," he added.

In addition to making the property accessible to anyone interested in seeing terraces and other conservation practices, crop records will be made available to the Soil Conservation Service (SCS) for their use in convincing others to adopt better conservation practices.

SCS Doing Research

The SCS is using the 80-acre area to do some learning of its own. "We are going to find out just what it does cost to put in this type of a terrace and water-control project under today's cost conditions," explained Bob Grey, assistant conservation engineer for Nebraska.

Wayne Rolofson of Greenwood is doing the construction, which will include both the long waterway and the type of terraces that can be farmed over the entire surface of the terrace.

"The terraces are also parallel to each other to make farming the area easier and to eliminate hard to farm short rows."

Planned On Computer

One unique feature of the system is that it was planned on a computer at the University of Nebraska. The computer sets the depth of the cut, the height of the terraces and even draws a diagram of how it should look.

"One of the things we are doing is trying to teach the computer some new techniques involved in developing these plans, but it still takes a man on the scene to be sure the plan is workable," Grey explained.

The SCS engineer has made some modifications in the computer plan which included moving a road to a more convenient location and selecting a better sight for borrowing soil in order to reduce the amount of topsoil loss from the area near the terrace.

Grass Waterway Pasture

The plan took into consideration the livestock operation on the farm. "The grassed waterway will make excellent pasture in the winter," Miller said.

A farmer who didn't have livestock might have channeled water to leaving the terraces via a tile outlet instead of the grassed waterway.

One additional reason Miller noted for the grassed path for the excess water was the difficulty of obtaining plastic tile. "Anything made from petroleum today is very scarce," Miller said.

Val Bohaty of the Lancaster County SCS office said he hoped people from Lincoln will take the trouble to drive out to the farm and look the project over. "It is a unique opportunity to see soil conservation in action," he said.

Cottonwood Harvest Planned By Box Firm

The American Box Co. may be harvesting 1.8 million to 2.4 million board feet of cottonwood trees in Nebraska each year, but environmentalists need not worry, the Nebraska Environmental Coalition (NEC) was told Saturday.

Bob Crosby, the company's general manager, said more than 35 million board feet of cottonwoods grow annually in Nebraska. The cottonwoods are used to make cardboard boxes.

Hugh Ralston, another American Box employee, said the company would not clearcut trees along a stream bank. This operation would expose soil to erosion and could pollute water with sediments.

Instead, Ralston said, only trees 15 inches in diameter or more will be cut, leaving more than 90% of the cottonwoods standing.

He added that American Box will contract with individual farmers to cut trees on their land for approximately one year.

Crosby said although the company has no provisions to plant trees, state land federal programs are available to help farmers plant them.

However, fast-growing clones, a tree segment which may be transplanted, could be planted and would protect soil from erosion, according to Prof. Walter Bagley of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

The company is located near Brady, 22 miles east of North Platte.

Recycling Workshop Planned

The Nebraska Environmental Coalition and Kearney State College (KSC) will sponsor a recycling workshop Saturday at the KSC Bruner Hall of Science.

The program, developed by Dr. Hal Nagel of the college's biology department and others, will report on the current and future status of recycling in Nebraska.

Speakers include Mrs. Les Anderson, chairperson of Keep Omaha Beautiful and Keep Nebraska Beautiful; Roger Downs of the Dennis Paper Co. in Lincoln; and Ted Hoffman, coalition chairman and chairman of Nebraskans for Returnables.

Petersen New Civic Club Head

DeWitt — New president of the DeWitt Civic Club is Dick Petersen. Other officers include Steven Klostermeier, vice president; Lowell Eisenhauer, secretary-treasurer; Bill Kuburz and Gerald Rehm, board members.

Neligh Family Has Unusual Addition

Neligh — "Alice," one of the pet llamas belonging to the Dr. Kenneth Pierson family of Neligh, recently gave birth to a baby. The furry infant has been named "Albert." The Piersons purchased their first llama about four years ago. The llamas have little problem adapting to the Nebraska climate and stand the cold winters especially well, the Piersons report.

Hungarians To Inspect Tractor Lab

A Hungarian study tour group has requested an extended look at the Tractor Testing Laboratory at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln East Campus and the wish will be granted today. The group, sponsored by the University of Minnesota, will spend most of the day on the East Campus and will move on to other Nebraska agricultural highlights Tuesday and Wednesday.

Iowa Firm Gets Macy Contract

Omaha — Clifford W. Nelson Contracting Co., Inc. of Omaha, Iowa, has been awarded a contract for emergency project rehabilitation on Blackbird Creek, five miles southeast of Macy, Neb., on the Omaha Tribe of Nebraska Indian Reservation. Due to heavy rainfall runoff last spring, approximately 2,200 tons of riprap must be replaced and 400 feet of channel and levee damage repaired. The award of the $32,955 contract was made by the corps of engineers in Omaha. Nelson's bid was the lowest of three submitted.

Cheerleading Competition Set For Peru

Peru — Peru State College has been chosen as one of 17 national sites for the second annual all-star cheerleading championship Saturday, Oct. 12. Junior high, junior varsity and varsity high school cheerleaders throughout the state will compete for the Nebraska championship.

Spotlight on Agriculture

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

One of my co-workers here at the paper has a city friend who has taken up farming. The man's son purchased two feeder pigs at $25 each and fed them $80 worth of feed and then sold the pigs for a grand total of $59.

The boy and his parents learned a good deal about what farming was really like this summer.

You don't lose money all the time, but what needs to be understood by city folks is that you have to make a good profit at least part of the time to offset the times when you do lose money.

There are two things I would say to the President, if I had a chance, about what I would do about inflation.

Food prices have been sharply increased by two things the government did in the past year. The policy of high interest rates has driven up the cost of producing beef tremendously. Most of the steps along the way to your plate from the ranch are financed with borrowed money. Interest is a part of the cost.

The policy of a 55 mile-an-hour speed limit has added to the cost of moving cattle, grain, meat, farm equipment, finished food products and everything else we buy.

To reduce inflation we must all produce more and consume less. It can be argued that high interest rates force us to consume less but it also forces us to produce less because it drives up the cost of producing anything. The average farm, earning a gross income of $40,000, is $80,000 in debt. Nearly $8,000 of the $40,000 will go for interest alone. Higher fuel, fertilizer and equipment costs will make turning a profit difficult at best.

Julian Rundle, the Australian who is running the Omaha stockyards, is a bundle of enthusiasm about his new computer system to match feeders' and ranchers' cattle needs.

The system passed its first real test this past weekend, but Rundle is worried what will happen if a heavy snow hits the ranch areas of western Nebraska, Montana and Wyoming.

"If everyone tries to ship at the same time, we will have trouble getting enough rail and truck equipment to move the cattle," he said.

Rundle also is planning a feeder pig auction soon. He honestly thinks hogs might go to much higher prices soon. Lots of bred sows and bred gilts have been coming to market. If corn prices should drop, the demand for feeder pigs could be terrific.

We ought to have enough beans to eat this winter. The harvest looks like the best in years. Prices will drop some, but the cost of competing foods is quite high, so I doubt that the bottom will drop out of the market. The costs of growing the beans, and no doubt of processing them, has at least doubled in the last year.

Farmers are being urged to treat their seed wheat this fall to prevent bunt, dwarf bunt and stinking smut. Such problems hurt the marketability of American wheat in overseas markets. Since 70-80% of our wheat is exported, it seems like a good idea. The cost is said to be about 30¢ per bushel of seed.

Howard Elm deserves the "funny fact of the week" award for a comment he made on local elevators buying their own branch line railroads. "It looks to me like some of these fellows will end up owning a damn long, narrow farm some day," he said.

At least that is what the Soybean Digest Magazine said he said.

Elm is probably right in many cases. By the time the branch line is abandoned by the railroad after all the court fights and delays, it isn't worth much. Years of neglect, some of it deliberate to prove it isn't profitable, probably hasten the decline of the branch line tracks.

Trying to put such a line back into usable conditions is a terribly expensive project.

Suspects In Custody In Brakeman's Death

Plattsmouth (UPI) — Two suspects were in custody at the Cass County Jail here Sunday in connection with the Saturday night shooting death of a Burlington-Northern Railroad brakeman.

James Weers, Raymond, was shot to death while riding in the caboose of a train about 10:30 p.m. when it was crossing an intersection near Cullom, 6 miles west and 2 miles north of Plattsmouth, the Cass County sheriff's office said.

Both the sheriff's office and Cass County Atty. James Begley declined to reveal identities of the suspects or any other information Sunday, but said more details would be released Monday.

"We're just not sure at this point," said Begley.

A spokesman for the sheriff's office said the shots were believed fired from a car waiting at the crossing for the train to pass. No motive has been established, authorities said.

Weers is survived by his wife Pat and his parents Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Weers of Malcolm.

2 Moot Court Teams Will Compete In Finals

The finals of the 1974 Allen Moot Court Senior Competition will be held at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the Nebraska Supreme Court Room.

The two teams to reach the final round are Penny Berger and Rae Schupack; Kelley Baker and David Buntain.

Judges for the finals will be Associate Justices Lawrence M. Clinton, Leslie Boslaugh, and Donald Brodkey of the Nebraska Supreme Court.

The winner of this year's competition will be awarded the Thomas Stinson Allen Memorial Award, in honor of the first graduate of the University of Nebraska College of Law. In addition, the team writing the best brief in the competition will be awarded the Kenneth L. Nohla Memorial Award, in honor of an outstanding Moot Court participant of the class of 1971.

Names of the winners will be engraved upon the respective plaques in the Law School building.

Participants in this year's competition, all seniors, included Kelley Baker, Penny Berger, Dave Buntain, Dick Cummings, John Gilroy, Dennis Graham, Barry Kaiman, Doug Loos, Richard Mellman, Bryon Orton, Brian Ridenour, Paul Schudt, Rae Schupack, Tom Sonntag, Toni Victor, and George Watson.

Weekly Grain Report

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

The American wheat team that just returned from Russia, where they were supposed to inspect the wheat crop, tells a story I had expected to hear.

They were not allowed to see anything like a reasonable survey of the wheat crop. This has been the case in the past with other groups who visited the U.S.S.R.

This year they may have a reason beyond the usual Russian fear of allowing anyone to see anything. They are having major problems in getting their huge acreage harvested. Just how great their problem is we don't know, but it is obviously quite real.

I had been feeling pretty smart about selling my wheat at $4.00, but now perhaps the people who held their wheat will profit by doing so.

In addition to the Russian harvest problem, there are at least 50 million people in Bengal, an Indian state, who are down to one meal a day.

India is buying wheat regularly in the U.S. and apparently is distributing wheat it obtained from the U.S.S.R. before the Russians started having harvest problems.

Soybeans may get a boost in price if the new meat grading laws are really effective in reducing fat in beef. There is currently a worldwide shortage of fats and oils, which is aiding soybean prices. Tighten the supply further with the new grading standards and you jack up soybean prices some on the oil side.

If a nice picturesque frost occurs anytime before Nov. 1, you could see soybean prices shoot past the $8.00 level at the farm.

Consumers Shun Purchases

American consumers, becoming aware that governmental response to the economic crisis is likely to continue to be inadequate, are also becoming increasingly pessimistic about the present and future conditions of the economy.

Little wonder, considering that other than talk about a balanced federal budget, the main concern with the two administrations during the past five and one-half years has been to help insure that corporate profits will remain high.

The most recent survey of consumer attitudes by The Conference Board shows significant drops from late spring in a consumer confidence index and a buying plans index.

The board reports that only 18% of the 10,000 families surveyed across the country label present business conditions as "good" and less than 15% believe that jobs are plentiful. Looking ahead, 20% expect the economy to "worsen" over the next six months and 26% believe that jobs will be harder to find.

Concludes the board: "With unemployment rising, inflation as vigorous as ever and disturbing economic news from abroad, in conjunction with the political trauma of recent months, consumers are apprehensive in appraising the future.

Beyond this, their real capacity to buy — disposable personal income — has been declining since the beginning of the year."

Bigger news than another finding that consumers are pessimistic, however, is a finding that many of them are beginning to do something about it by tightening their belts.

"These sentiments and circumstances appear to have carried over into buying plans. The Conference Board said, suggesting that "consumers are disposed to curtail their spending in the months ahead, at least for high-priced items." The survey noted that declines were registered in all the major buying "series" included in the sample. For example, the proportions of families planning to buy new or used cars, homes and major appliances have dropped significantly.

It might be tempting for government economic advisers to credit past and present administration jawboning about belt-tightening for the apparent slump in buying plans. But the real fact of declining disposable income plus the realization among consumers that only they will be able to battle inflation effectively has more to do with it.

And from that standpoint, the survey results can be viewed optimistically.

Too Little Also Bad

The illegal or undercover use of vast amounts of money during the 1972 presidential campaign spurred interest in reforming campaign spending laws and in the concept of public financing of elections.

A second consequence of the campaign scandals of 1972 has been the drying up of political contributions, with the Republican Party especially hard hit.

In Nebraska, the GOP is reportedly within two weeks of running out of money to run its state headquarters and the Marvel-for-governor campaign is suffering acutely from a lack of financial support. Other Republican candidates have not received their promised allotments from the state party.

There are probably a number of reasons why candidates' campaign treasuries are not filled to overflowing this year, but we think public disenchantment with politics is one of the main reasons. And the result is that many candidates are put in a bind through no fault of their own.

It's our feeling that a lack of campaign money is as unhealthy as having too much unaccounted-for money floating around in a campaign. Whenever there is a vast disparity in campaign money between opposing candidates, the people won't get the full picture.

Many candidates — and we emphatically state we are not talking about any Nebraska candidates — hurt for money also might be tempted to accept help from a sugar daddy who wants to take an outside chance of owning a public official.

To repeat, too little money for a campaign can be as bad as too much and a paucity of funds is also an argument in favor of public financing, whatever other faults that concept might have.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

WASHINGTON — Shirley Temple Black has sailed away to Ghana. George Bush, having lost the vice-presidency, has been given a Chinese fortune cookie. Kenneth Rush, his economic wisdom unappreciated, has been dismissed from the White House and sent to enjoy himself at the embassy in Paris.

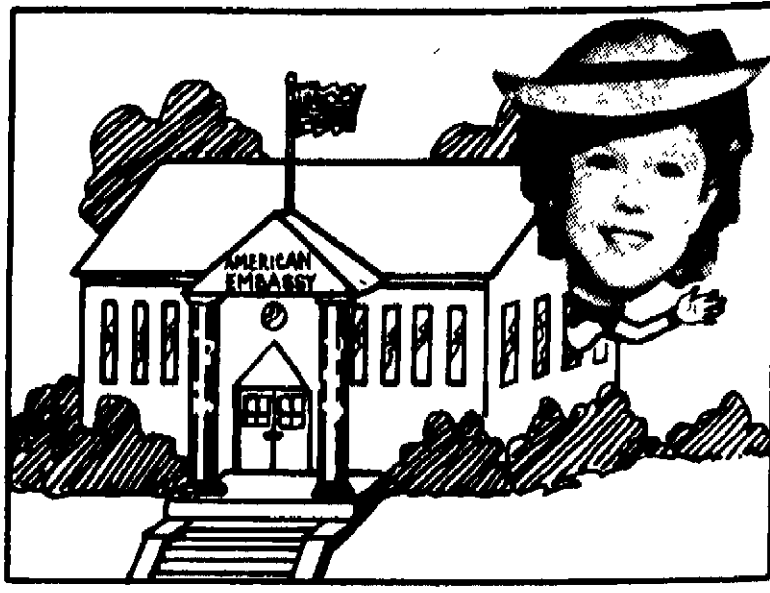

These brilliant diplomatic appointments settled, President Ford has now to decide whether Patrick Buchanan, the literary slugger on the old Watergate Nixon Nine, should be appointed to the diplomatic league, as ambassador to South Africa.

In most respects, Ford's use of American embassies as a dumping ground for political claimants and miscellaneous inconvenient persons is not unique. On the contrary, it is all too familiar. But aren't we ever going to make a clean break with the past and begin filling these jobs on merit?

This curious custom of giving out ambassadorships as if they were party favors is profoundly demoralizing to the men and women of the career foreign service. Imagine that you have spent 20 or 30 years in the slow upward climb of a diplomatic career — three years in Bolivia, three years in Iceland, three years back in Washington, three glorious years in Paris, then one assignment to Paraguay, and so on and on. When you know the ropes thoroughly and yet are not so old you have lost all your fire, are you rewarded with an embassy and finally get to run a show of your own?

No, some stranger who barely knows the difference between an embassy and a consulate walks in off the street and is named ambassador. If you are "lucky," you get to become a career minister and serve as the No. 2 man, doing most of the substantive work and advising a neophyte ambassador on the errors to avoid.

their number would be the American envoy in Peking?

This bad practice downgrades the importance of an American ambassador and therefore of everyone who works for him. Thus, Bush is a very nice man but he knows as much about China as the usual rich Texas tourist. Being infinitely courteous, the Chinese will host many sumptuous dinners at which he can practice with his chopsticks and smile his nervous, friendly smile. But being realistic, the Chinese, if they have anything important to communicate to the United States, will have one of their own people talk directly to Secretary of State Kissinger.

How can such an arrangement possibly build the professional self-esteem of those American foreign service officers who can read and speak Chinese fluently, who have spent years studying Chinese politics and culture, and who know that in an entirely sane government one of

In one important respect, Ford has moved this old bad tradition into dangerous ground. He has nominated Peter Flanigan, a former aide to President Nixon, as ambassador to Spain.

Under the Nixon administration, the usual delicate relationship between making a sizable campaign contribution and getting considered for a diplomatic post was coarsened into a tobacco auction. Herbert Kalmbach, personal lawyer to Nixon, was in charge of appraising the credit-worthiness of the bidders. Flanigan was the auctioneer. Kalmbach is now in prison, having pleaded guilty to selling ambassadorships. Flanigan has the effrontery to seek an embassy for himself.

In this context, Walter Pincus in the "New Republic" last month called attention to the circumstances surrounding Nixon's appointment of Dr. Ruth Farkas as ambassador to Luxembourg. Kalmbach testified under oath to the House Judiciary Committee's impeachment inquiry that he first heard of Dr. Farkas in 1971 in a conversation with Flanigan.

"Peter said, 'Herb, we would like to have you contact a Dr. Ruth Farkas in New York. She is interested in giving $250,000 for Costa Rica,'" Kalmbach testified.

Kalmbach arranged a luncheon in New York with Dr. Farkas who demurred at the price. According to his testimony, she said, "Well, you know, I am interested in Europe, I think, and isn't $250,000 an awful lot of money for Costa Rica?"

Ultimately, Mrs. Farkas and her husband contributed $300,000 and she got Luxembourg.

By nominating Flanigan for the embassy in Spain, Ford identifies his own name with the corrupt, cash-on-the-barrel-head practices of his predecessor.

There are rare instances in which a President could reasonably appoint a distinguished outsider to a diplomatic post. But these should be persons so eminent and so uniquely qualified that their nomination would be immediately recognized as a stroke of imagination. No one supposes that Mrs. Farkas or Mrs. Black or Messrs. Rush, Bush, Buchanan, and Flanigan fall into that category.

Idle rich men, unemployed political hatchmen, and bored ladies who want to take up some diversion livelier than needlepoint — it is a wonder that the diplomatic service does not sink under the weight of them all.

JACK ANDERSON

Earnest Battle Continues Against Police Corruption

WASHINGTON — America's top prosecutors gathered behind closed doors in Washington last month to take up an urgent problem: What can be done about police corruption?

The ugly truth is that more and more policemen are themselves becoming criminals. For cash under the table, they protect organized crime, expedite the flow of illicit drugs and even close their eyes to gangland murders.

Police scandals have erupted in more than a dozen major cities. New York City's finest, for example, have been accused of everything from stealing the money out of lost-and-found wallets to selling confiscated heroin back to the underworld.

Former Commissioner Patrick Murphy told us he had found so much corruption in the New York police force that to clean it up entirely would have left some areas of the city at a skeleton level of police protection.

In other cities, law-abiding citizens are compelled to accept police corruption as the price they must pay for protection from violent street crimes.

The prosecutors were invited to the Washington seminar by the Police Foundation, which is headed by Murphy. Attending the secret sessions were the men who brought down ex-Vice President Spiro Agnew, cracked Chicago Mayor Richard Daley's political machine and are now putting the squeeze on Philadelphia's Mayor Frank Rizzo and New York City's political boss Meade Esposito.

Here are highlights from the confidential minutes, which we obtained from one of the participants:

"Unfortunately," reports the minutes, "the group ... found in its experiences that most police administrators were reluctant to attack the corruption problem unless a scandal had already surfaced."

The prosecutors were also scornful of their political bosses and counted more on the media "to generate reform and public support.

"Most elected officials were reluctant to tackle the corruption problem unless they were newly elected or a scandal had already surfaced," the prosecutors agreed. They suggested ways should be found to make it "bad politics to have a corrupt police department."

The Philadelphia delegates described how mayor Frank Rizzo, who came out of the police force, had blocked investigations. In Philadelphia and other cities, internal affairs units, which the police have promised would swiftly clean up any corruption, have covered it up instead.

"Police internal affairs units are generally ineffective in dealing with the corruption problem," agreed the delegates. "They do not pose a serious threat to either the corrupt cop or the supervisors who, through laxity or intentional oversight, allow corrupt behavior to continue."

The prosecutors warned that internal affairs officers also "have established ties within the department." Some may have been on the take themselves; others may be reluctant to bring charges "against those who may someday be their superiors."

The prosecutors disagreed whether an independent inspection service was adequate or whether it should be totally removed from the police force. But they generally agreed that the inspection unit would have the power to wiretap, eavesdrop, issue subpoenas and grant immunity.

"Without these powers," the majority felt, a reformer "may be limited in what he can accomplish."

The prosecutors also favored using "turn-arounds" — policemen who are caught and are given clemency if they will lead the probes to higher officials — despite the fact that "turn-arounds are currently viewed negatively by the law-enforcement community."

The prosecutors had a low regard, according to the minutes, for police unions. Many unions ignored corruption among the members, and others actively opposed efforts to eliminate corrupt police.

The International Association of Chiefs of Police has also shown a strange reluctance to press the corruption issue, possible because it might embarrass some of the most distinguished chiefs.

At the end of the session, Murphy solicited suggestions from the prosecutors who proposed everything from swapping information to setting higher standards.

One prosecutor suggested a college-like academy for police. Another cracked that "there was no basis for concluding a relationship exists between college education and integrity." He possibly had in mind that the major Watergate defendants had attended the best universities.

The Ford-funded Police Foundation has offered, if invited, to send a team into problem cities to study corruption and to recommend reforms. But so far, no one apparently wants to risk a good Murphy clean-up.

THE BLACK HOLE OF INNER SPACE

KEVIN P. PHILLIPS

National Police Force

NEW YORK — Almost three-quarters of the American people agree with Attorney General William Saxbe's controversial suggestion that if the crime rate keeps increasing, we may need a national police force in the United States.

This and other attitudes toward the soaring U.S. crime rate emerged in a nationwide telephone poll of 1,118 persons taken between Sept. 10 and Sept. 16.

Here are the principal findings:

+49% of Americans had read or heard about Saxbe's national police force remark.

+42% of those questioned supported the idea of a national police force right now, and another 32% conditionally agreed with the idea if crime gets worse.

+Demand for a national police force is strongest in big cities.

In response to the controversy stirred up by Saxbe's comments, we asked our sample the following question: "Several weeks ago, Attorney General Saxbe, in a speech in Chicago, said that if the crime rate in this country keeps on increasing, we may need a national police force. Did you read or hear anything about this?"

Of those questioned, a surprising 49% had read or heard of Saxbe's idea. Another 9% were not sure. Forty-three percent said they didn't know of the Attorney General's remarks. This is an unusually high level of recollection of the comments of an individual Cabinet officer.

Part of the public's sensitivity to national police force proposals stems from concern over increasing local crime. We asked our sample the following question: "In the area where you reside, comparing now with a year ago, would you say you have more or less crime now compared with last year at this time?" Forty-nine percent said there was more now, and just 8% said less. Thirty-two percent said that things were about the same, and 11% had no opinion. Women were more concerned about increasing local crime than men.

Next, we asked for specific reaction to Saxbe's theme: "Right now, do you agree or disagree that we need a national police force?" Forty-two percent agreed that a national police force was necessary, and 21% disagreed. Thirty-two percent expressed conditional agreement, saying that a national police force could be necessary if crime gets worse, or if it could be set up to supplement and work with local law-enforcement authorities. This was Saxbe's own position — simply suggesting that a national police force might become necessary if crime continued to grow.

Combining these categories, 75% of the U.S. can be said to agree or conditionally agree with the idea of a national police force. Women are more enthusiastic than men: 76% of the women polled expressed full or conditional approval of the idea, in contrast to 71% of the men. The preponderance of women was even more emphatic among those agreeing that we need a national police force right now — 47% of all women concur, compared to 37% of all men.

On a geographic basis, support for the national police force proposal is strongest in the nation's large cities. In the top 30 metropolitan areas, 79% of those interviewed had heard of Saxbe's proposal, which was widely covered because of urban pre-occupation with crime. In these areas, 85% of those questioned thought that there was more crime than there had been a year ago, and only 9% thought that the crime rate had remained constant.

Because of these concerns, big-city residents were extremely responsive to Saxbe's comments. Asked about the idea of a national police force, 57% favored its creation right now, 32% agreed with the proposal on a conditional basis, and only 9% disagreed. Clearly, the nation's major metropolitan areas, with their fast-rising crime rates, are favorable to the idea of a national police force.

Mid-sized metropolitan areas are somewhat less favorable. Crime is not increasing as quickly and less local media attention was given to Saxbe's remarks. Fifty-two percent of those questioned favored a national police force, 20% went along on a conditional basis and 21% were opposed.

In small cities, we found only 17% of those questioned agreeing with the national police force proposal, and 34% went along on a conditional basis — if crime were to get worse. Thirty-nine percent disagreed with the notion.

In sum, growing public support for the idea of a national police force is rooted in the rising crime rates — and fears — of our major cities.

ON TARGET

By DON WALTON

What this country needs is:

—an economy built more on generosity (even imposed) than on greed.
—up to 24 months of alternative service for Richard Nixon.

—a stern condemnation from the United Nations for helping undermine, and thus eventually overthrow, the elected government of Chile.

—a Yankee pennant.

That's one thing a vacation does — it puts things in perspective. The price of oil may rise; the popularity of the President may plummet. But who cares?

It's the blue in the sky that really matters, eh?

And there has been some new blue lately: —the government continues to lose in cases where it confronts citizens expressing themselves in social or political action.

—Evel loses, but lives. Who could ask for a better result?

You can get too much of a good thing, too.

The ballgame we chose in New York on vacation turned out to be the 25-inning marathon between the Mets and the Cardinals. I missed the last nine frames.

And the buildup for the brawl between Ali and Foreman has now been extended by a month due to an ow-ey inflicted on the champ in training. Hopefully, they'll battle in October, before Muhammad gets any older.

And then, hopefully, Ali will win it and announce that he will keep the crown in Africa where challengers can come to contend for it in jungle rings attended by local inhabitants who are admitted free. No television; no paid gate; no loot. If you want the crown, you have to come fight for it — with no purse included. Like it?

But, champ?

Nope, man, that's the way it is. You come here. You want it? You come here.

But we could each make a couple of million?

I've made mune, man. You want the crown or the loot?

Well, both.

Did Laird Author Plan To Curb Kissinger?

Monday, Sept. 23, 1974 The Lincoln Star 5

Washington (AP) — Rightly or wrongly, Melvin R. Laird is being mentioned most often as the likely proponent of a rejected "transition recommendation" that the powers of Henry A. Kissinger be cut back.

An aide said President Ford himself suspects the former defense secretary was behind published reports last week of a recommendation that the secretary of state surrender his dual assignment as White House assistant and staff director of the National Security Council.

At the State Department, however, some sources speculated the aborted move to strip Kissinger of one of his hats was pushed by Rep. Albert H. Quie, R-Minn.

The Associated Press reported the recommendation last Tuesday but received none of its information from Laird or Quie, close friends of the President and members of a small group that engineered Ford's 1968 election as House Republican leader.

Laird's office reported he was out of the city. Quie did not return a reporter's telephone call.

As secretary of defense during Richard Nixon's first term as President, Laird sometimes differed with Kissinger on Vietnam policy. Laird was more sensitive than Kissinger to the political consequences of widespread public opposition to the war.

Officials said they knew of no attempt by any responsible person to drive Kissinger out of government, although some columnists have suggested as much.

In any event, Ford gave public assurances Wednesday that he values Kissinger both as secretary of state and as staff chief of the NSC.

Ford personally wrote out a tribute to Kissinger which he added to his Wednesday address to the United Nations General Assembly. He acted following two meetings with his top foreign policy adviser.

Kissinger is understood to have been deeply disturbed by reports of the recommendation that the scope of his operations be reduced in order to assure Ford a broader range of advice on national security questions.

There was unconfirmed speculation he may have told Ford he could not continue to conduct delicate international negotiations, in the Middle East and with the Soviet Union, unless the potential threat to his domain was removed.

Ford's initial reaction to the published reports, relayed by a spokesman some six hours after Kissinger first discussed the matter with him, was ambiguous. While implying Kissinger would retain his NSC post, Ford did not say so directly.

The two men conferred en route to New York next morning and Ford later told the General Assembly that Kissinger had his full backing, adding:

"I have supported and will continue to endorse his many efforts as secretary of state and in our National Security Council system to build a world of peace."

Newsman noted Ford made no direct reference to Kissinger's role as NSC staff director and that, even if his only assignment was that of secretary of state, Kissinger automatically would play an important part in the operation of the NSC system.

After addressing the General Assembly, Ford went to the nearby headquarters of the American mission to the U.N. and, speaking off-the-cuff, said:

"We are lucky and fortunate to have Secretary Kissinger as our secretary of state and the head of our National Security Council."

Despite the President's statements, some administration officials continue to believe he would be better served if Kissinger's NSC and Cabinet roles were separated. For the present, however, Ford would appear to have firmly rejected the idea.

The Hon. Paul White, chief justice of the Nebraska Supreme Court, will address members of Rotary Club No. 14 at their Tuesday noon meeting at the Radisson-Cornhusker Hotel.

ENDANGERED SPECIES . . . peregrine falcon held by Professor Meng.

Death Sets Back Try To Save Falcon

New Paltz, N.Y. (AP) — A professor's 10-year-old experiment to save the endangered peregrine falcon has been set back by the death — apparently at the hands of man — of a peregrine who has just been returned to the wild.

"We had everything completely solved except man," says Dr. Heinz Meng, who in 1971 successfully bred peregrine falcons in captivity.

Someone Killed One

Meng believes someone killed one of the two peregrines he released this summer from a tower at the State University College at New Paltz. He says it was the first time Peregrines bred in captivity had been returned to the wild.

The majestic bird, who once proliferated on cliffs along the East Coast of the United States, is on the endangered species list.

The peregrine swoops down at speeds of up to 200 miles an hour to capture its prey, usually smaller birds. In the early 1950s, the falcons became infested with DDT after eating birds that had eaten DDT-infested insects. The falcon eggs became too frail to withstand incubation and the species began to disappear.

"Most Spectacular"

"They're the most spectacular, most exciting, most thrilling, most everything bird in the world . . . but people just don't care," says Meng, who began his experiments in 1964.

Last spring, Meng bred two falcons he named Adam and Eve. In June, when they were three weeks old, he put them in an enclosure atop the 10-story faculty tower.

At the end of July, when their feathers grew in, he opened the cage and they began to explore the foothills of the Catskill Mountains.

Eve's severed wing was found earlier this month in a wooded area by one of Meng's biology students. "It could only have been done by a dull knife or hatchet," Meng says. Adam has been missing since mid-August and Meng fears he too may have been killed.

"Everything had succeeded. I was still providing them food," said Meng.

Migrate South

He had hoped the birds would migrate south in October and eventually return to breed naturally on the tower or the cliffs of the nearby Shawangunk Mountains.

Meng says the state Department of Environmental Conservation had received an anonymous call from a man who asked when something was going to be done "about those killer birds on campus."

"He had no idea how ecology works," Meng says. "The peregrine kills for survival alone, to eat. They weed out the weaker and diseased birds and thus protect the balance of nature."

Next spring, Meng will attempt to release several pairs of peregrines into the wilds.

"We've solved the problem of breeding and learned about reintroduction this year," he says. "Although this is a temporary setback, at least we know how dangerous man is to the whole thing, to any life."

Minnesotans Win Hog Honors; Omahan Shows Lamb Champ

Omaha (AP)—Two Minnesota youths won top honors in the swine division of the Ak-Sar-Ben Livestock Show Sunday.

Gary Davis, 18, of Oakland, Minn., showed a 245-pound Duroc barrow to the grand championship.

Reserve championship and showmanship honors went to Doug Pichner, 19, of Owatonna, Minn. He showed a 237-pound crossbred.

Ward Siert, 16, of Omaha, showed the grand champion in the 4-H lamb competition.

The 98-pound Hampshire wether shown by Siert was judged the best of 543 market lambs entered.

The reserve grand champion was a 101-pound Hampshire wether shown by Kevin Hamann, 16, of Wahoo.

In the Beef Breeding Heifer Show, Dennis Quist, 18, of Stanton, Iowa, had the champion in the Angus division, a late summer yearling.

David Kilgore, 15, of Rising City had the reserve champion, an early summer yearling.

Butch McIntosh, 18, of Whitman, had the champion in Charolais judging, a summer yearling. His heifer was the 4-H champion at the Nebraska State Fair.

Exhibiting the reserve champion Charolais heifer was Mel Miller, 15, of Osceola, Iowa. It was a late summer yearling.

Fifteen-year-old Rhonda Allenman of Slater, Iowa, exhibited the champion Hereford heifer, Sara Stille, 12, of Storm Lake, Iowa, had the reserve champion Hereford.

Miss Stille's Simmental-Hereford heifer took the commercial division title and the reserve championship went to a home-

Former Queen's Daughter Named Iowa 4-H Queen

Omaha (AP)—Donna Christensen, 17, of Hastings, Iowa, was named Ak-Sar-Ben's Iowa 4-H queen Sunday.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Christensen. Donna's mother received the same honor 24 years ago.

Miss Christensen is a senior at Nishna Valley Community School at Hastings. She was selected mainly on the basis of her 4-H work.

Skultety Picked Associate Dean Of Med School

Omaha (AP)—Dr. F. Miles Skultety has been named associate dean for clinical affairs at the University of Nebraska Medical Center.

Dean Perry Rigby said Sunday that Dr. Skultety will succeed Dr. Frank Land, who has accepted a post at the University of New Mexico.

Dr. Skultety, a neurosurgeon, has been on the Nebraska faculty since 1966 and has been chairman of the section of neurosurgery.

The Board of Regents will be asked to approve the appointment at its October meeting.

Dr. Skultety founded the pain center, one of five in the nation, in 1973 at University Hospital in Omaha. He has directed its activities and served as interim chairman of the Department of Neurology.

Dr. Skultety is a native of Rochester, N. Y., and received degrees from the University of Rochester and the University of Iowa.

He practiced at hospitals in Massachusetts and was a senior resident in neurosurgery at the University of Iowa Hospitals. He taught at Iowa from 1952 to 1966.

Observatory To Hold Open House Friday

An open house will be held from 8 to 11 p.m. Friday, at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln's Behlen Observatory at the University Field Laboratory near Mead.

The open house will offer visitors an opportunity to view the heavens through the university's 30-inch telescope.

Inflation Changes Lincoln Lifestyles

By GRACIA McANDREW
Star Staff Writer

Inflation, called the nation's major economic problem, is also a major concern for American families from low to upper income levels. And many Lincoln families fear they are sinking in a sea of inflation.

While national economists debate whether inflation will stabilize at an average 9% in 1974 or will soar into the double digit figures, some Lincoln parents have already resigned themselves to the fact that now is not the time to worry about that college education for their grade-school-aged children.

They're more concerned about those taken-for-granted necessities — those little things like proper clothing, nutritional food and warm and dry shelter.

Take for example, the Lincoln widow who is the mother of a son and a foster son with cerebral palsy. She and her family exist on $300 a month plus food stamps.

"I buy enough to keep us from starving," she said. "I don't know how to beat it. I had to quit baking because flour and sugar are so high.

"Food is way out of sight. There is no such thing stretching money when it comes to buying food.

"It (inflation) has affected me something awful," she stressed, "because I need things."

The only thing that is saving her is that she has no monthly rent or house payments.

"I often tell myself that the only smart thing I've done in my life was to buy my own home," she explained. "But there are things that need to be done to my house.

"The gutter on the back of the house needs to be replaced and there is a faucet leak in the bathroom. It costs $15 just to have someone come out and look at it and that doesn't include any repair costs. I know it's wasting water."

Likewise, families in the middle-income group are faced with the increasingly difficult tasks of maintaining their homes and feeding and clothing their children.

"I think that we are fairly typical of any family of four where the wife does very little outside the home, as far as salary is concerned," said a man (Mr. R.) who is a teacher for the Lincoln Public Schools.

"Inflation has definitely affected us," he said. "I make $12,000 a year and how anyone makes it on anything less than that, I don't know. That is what's scary.

"Yet, I find it difficult to cry about this thing, since my position is relative to the position of others," he added, thus explaining his reasons for not having the Star use his name.

Of those even less fortunate than he and his family, he said, "Believe me, I understand their plight, but I don't know what to do about it."

The family's most recent major purchases are an economy car in 1971 and a color television last summer, "because our old set finally broke down. Besides that is virtually our only entertainment, except for getting together with friends.

"If I represent the middle income class, which comprises most of Lincoln, who's keeping the stores open? We just don't buy," said Mr. N. "We haven't bought any furniture in five years or more. We get a lot of give-away furniture from relatives.

"In a sense, our house is our only savings — the equity we have built up."

father who gave them a side of beef.

"If we didn't have this, all we would be eating is hamburger," said Mr. N.

"I've cut out all salads and desserts, unless we have guests, because flour and sugar are so high," said Mrs. N. "Mostly we have the basics — vegetables and meat. This year we had a garden which helped us tremendously."

now," Matt emphasized. "I guess mostly we just spend a little more time being cognizant of the monetary situation.

According to George J. Krumm, who lives on a pension from the Burlington Northern Railroad, "the budget I had when I retired seven years ago is no good now. I go over that budget $65 a month for sure, mainly because of groceries and gasoline."

'I'm Afraid,' She Said Simply

By Patricia O'Brien

Chicago — I went shopping on Chicago's north shore the other day, and it was like stepping into a huge Monopoly game. Here were hundreds of people shopping fervently from store to store, spending fistfuls of dollars everywhere, looking as if they could buy Park Place in a minute.

Not such a surprising scene, actually. Isn't Chicago's north shore the land of affluence, where inflation only nips at the heels? Don't the poor and the old and the family trying to make it on $12,000 a year all live farther south and west?

But I had a curious impression of people running very fast because they think it's almost time to pack up the phony cash and fold up the board. Maybe the game is going to end.

I went into a furniture store to price dining room sets that I can't afford and watched other shoppers gathering around a $300 "conversation piece" chair — a chair not so much for sitting as for people without opinions or ideas who need something to talk about.

Two persons placed orders for the chair while I watched, both of them laughing nervously about how ridiculous they were to spend the money. Two others demurred, even when the saleswoman urged them on: "You might as well buy now, even though you can't afford it," she said cheerfully. "Believe me, you'll be able to afford even less next year."

Then I went to a boutique that specializes in things like $100 handbags and peignoirs lined with goose feathers. The sportswear department was crammed with racks of clothes and dozens of people were buying them, piling things on the sales counter so quickly the clerks couldn't keep up.

A woman waiting to put down her money for an $85 skirt was discussing inflation with another shopper. What really worried her was the price of sugar. Her voice trembled as she complained, because she was just realizing the cost of sugar has gone up 300% in one year.

I eavesdropped a lot that afternoon, all the people with their checkbooks and credit cards out on the counters were talking about money. It wasn't with the urgency or bitterness of someone who cashes a social security check and must spend it all at the grocery store. But it was with a tension that belied their Pucci scarves and their limousines in the parking lot.

Most of these people aren't as wealthy as they like to appear to be. Most of them live up to the edge of their incomes, and most of them are convinced their neighbors are more affluent than they are. When they shop, they are buying status. It's a one-upmanship game that is getting harder as prices go higher. And even though they may switch to hamburger at the grocery counter, they still want $300 conversation pieces for their guests to sit on.

But when will the shoppers with their $85 skirts be unable to pay the milkman?

I was thinking about this on my way home when I stopped at the drugstore to buy a few minor items that amounted to $7.50. I complained, but the saleswoman didn't smile at my tired jokes about the economy.

"A woman came in here a while ago," she said, "and asked me the price of a notebook. I've worked here for four years and I said, 'Oh, it's about 49¢.' Then I picked it up and looked at the price. It was $1.49." She looked at me directly and then put a name to something I had felt floating in the air all afternoon, an obscure something cutting through all the contradictions of frantic affluence I had watched that day.

"I'm afraid," she said simply.

(c) Chicago Sun-Times

Mr. and Mrs. N. purchased the older home with the intention of doing a little remodeling, but right now they are faced with the dilemma of just trying to scrape enough money together for the removal of two diseased elm trees on their property.

"My salary keeps going up and our standard of living keeps going down," Mr. N. added. "Up until the last couple of years, I didn't go to school without a jacket and tie. I used to buy a suit and sport coat every year. I don't do that any more. In the last three years I have bought two sport coats and no suits."

Also, in previous years, the couple had a purchasing plan in which they tried to save money and then spend it, rather than using charge accounts and cards. Now they have to use these accounts just to get by.

"We had to buy all of our six-year-old son's school clothes on credit this year," said Mrs. N. "Also, when our oldest son started school, we thought that we would start saving for his college education. We thought that we would be on our feet by then, but we are less able to put something away now than before.

"All those things like gasoline and electricity that keep going up, give us less to buy the necessities.

"I know we are eating less well than we did five years ago," she said, adding that when the family says grace before each meal — "We thank thee Father for our meat" — she is always referring to her

"I'm still comfortable and I don't feel deprived," concluded Mr. N., "but if I'm representative of middle income, then middle income is hurting."

For those in the upper-middle income bracket, the impact of inflation has been felt, but not quite so severely.

"Basically, we're buying nothing on installment — no long-term purchases and we have cancelled all charge accounts," said Paul Matt, a young Lincoln attorney, whose income combined with that of his wife's hits the $25,000 to $30,000 mark.

"I just got tired of paying 18% interest on charge accounts and a minimum of 12% interest on long-term loans," he explained.

"The only thing we spend money on now is the house, but we beat it (inflation), because we spent most of our money before this thing really happened," he added.

"We don't go out to eat as much," Matt said, "but home entertaining is about the same.

"And since there is only two of us, food hasn't been affected."

"I spend less on clothes, but that is directly related to not charging anything," said Mrs. Matt. "We buy so many less things and you would think that we would have more money to spend or save, but we really don't."

"I believe in investing any money right

Krumm explained he and his wife have excluded steaks from their diet — "We don't buy 'em, they're too high"—and that they "just have to shop around" for the best food bargains.

He added that participating in the Senior Diner eating program for senior citizens three or four times a week has helped cut down their grocery bills.

In addition, Krumm said that he enjoys fishing and if his luck is good, the couple's diet is supplemented with fresh fish.

"I cut down on buying clothing, because I really don't need them," he said. "I bought one suit and I only wear it on Sundays and to weddings.

"It is the same with shoes. You've got to save them. I'm telling you, those shoes — they cost $30 or $40 and if you buy them, it knocks a hole in your budget right now.

"And you can't even think about buying a car, no matter how old your car gets," he said.

By and large, Krumm indicated that with careful budgeting he and his wife are getting by, but like other retired persons, now that they have the time to travel, the prices are too restrictive.

"We go to Denver once in a while to visit our son and his family," he said. "And I have a daughter in Cincinnati, but we haven't been there in three or four years."

'Sir Or Madam' Looks Better All The Time

DEAR ABBY: A reader signed "Ms. W." requests a non-sexist salutation for business letters.

Why is a salutation necessary at all? It should have been discarded years ago with such useless phrases as, "Beg leave to reply to your favor of the 15th instance," and "your most obedient servant."

"Dear Anybody" is both redundant and archaic, along with the traditional "Very truly yours," which, in a business letter, is the ultimate in hypocrisy. No?

MISS BRANIGAN

DEAR MISS B.: Yes. Many non-sexist salutations for business letters were submitted. For example: "Gentleperson," or the "Gentlepeople."

Others suggested the bright and cheery, "Good morning!" (How about those who don't get around to reading their mail until 4 p.m.?)

Try, "Dear Person." (That's too impersonal, like "Occupant.")

Also, "Hi there," or would you believe, "Howdy!"

Come to think of it, "Dear Sir or Madam," or "To whom it may concern" are beginning to look better to me.

My husband married the "other woman." He has visitation rights, which are fair enough, but when he comes to pick up the children, he and his wife and her eight-year-old son, come right to my door. I feel I have to invite them in, and then I have to ask them to sit down. Once they are seated they stay and stay until I feel compelled to offer them some refreshments.

Meanwhile, making small talk with them is sheer torture because I feel so uncomfortable in this woman's presence. I can hardly look at her at my husband's side without wanting to burst into tears.

It seems an eternity until they take my children and leave. They sometimes come back "early," and again they are all at my door, expecting to be invited in. These visits are a terrible strain for me.

I can't help how I feel, Abby. Am I wrong? How should I handle this?

STILL HURTING

DEAR STILL: Ask your lawyer to write your husband a letter suggesting that he either pick up the children alone, or leave his wife and stepchild in the car. You're not wrong. There's no reason why you should be cast in the role of an unwilling hostess.

DEAR ABBY: I was pleased to see that you view reading a spouse's mail as a violation of privacy, and place it in the same class with reading a child's diary or listening in on the extension telephone. Those are exactly my sentiments.

I don't want to see my wife's mail, and that means even after it has been opened and is in plain view. When my wife has had a telephone conversation, I never ask: "Who was that, dear?" I figure if she wants to tell me, she will volunteer the information.

I offer you free of charge my father's philosophy: "Don't ever put another person in the position of having to lie to you."

VALUES PRIVACY

DEAR VALUES: We agree — to a point. But no one "has to" lie. Simply say: "I prefer not to answer that question."

DEAR ABBY: I am a 54-year-old married man. (I've put in 22 years with this woman). For the past four or five years, she has been accusing me of running around with other women, which is not true. By the way, my wife is 42, and a good-looking blond. Even though she's put on a few extra pounds, physically she is just as appealing to me now as she was 20 years ago.

To get the point, I have been accused of playing the game so much that two weeks ago I joined the team.

I met an attractive 30-year-old woman who makes me feel like a man of 20. She says she loves me, and I could love her, but the problem is, I still love my wife.

Is it possible to love two women at the same time?

DOUBLE TROUBLE

DEAR TROUBLE: Only if you have the time. (You can "love" more than one person — but in a "different" way.) Obviously your conscience is bothering you, so the advice from here is to knock off the extracurricular affair and play it straight.

DEAR ABBY: That disturbed young mother who couldn't "love" her baby because it had such a homely nose prompts me to write this.

I recently visited a young (and very handsome) couple who have a nine-month-old baby. No one warned me, so I wasn't prepared for what I saw when they brought her out.

She was positively the homeliest baby I had ever seen. Unusually homely!

I was at a loss for what to say, so I just said, "Hi, darling baby!" She smiled, her eyes twinkled and her homely little face lit up as she held out her arms to welcome me as a new friend.

Within minutes I knew the secret of that baby's charm. Her parents treated her as though she were an exquisitely beautiful and beloved treasure by letting her know what a loved baby she was. Consequently, she is exactly what they hold her to be — a beautiful treasure.

Within minutes one forgets that she is not a very pretty baby, because it doesn't really matter. Her personality is sunny, lovable and responsive.

Parents of "homely" babies can learn a lot from this couple. I did.

A FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: And I'll

wager so did many others.

DEAR ABBY: Please print this for the mother who was so "depressed" because her baby had such a large nose.

Our first baby was a beautiful little girl. There was only one problem. She was born with "spina bifida" — an open spine. Our baby is only four months old and she has had, to date, surgery five times.

Abby, instead of this mother looking at her baby and crying because of her large nose, she should be crying for joy and thanking God for having blessed her with a healthy baby. She doesn't know how lucky she is.

DON AND JOAN

DEAR ABBY: Tell that small-town bartender that he doesn't have to lie. If someone phones the bar and asks if Joe Blow is there, all he has to do is page Joe Blow by calling his name loudly.

If Joe Blow doesn't want to answer the page, it's his business. That way the bartender isn't in the middle.

LADY BARTENDER

DEAR LADY: Leave it to a lady to figure out how to keep from getting in the middle.

Female Plumber Likes The Wages

New York (UPI) — Elizabeth Young wanted better pay and a job where she could work with her hands.

So the 29-year-old former youth worker is now New York City's first female union plumbers' trainee.

"Josephine had nothing to do with it," said Miss Young, clad in a flowered blouse and dungarees, in a reference to the lady plumber in a kitchen cleaner's TV commercials.

"Basically I wanted to do a job where I could work with my hands," she said. "Plumbing is practical and it's a good living besides." She now makes $4.08 an hour and will go to $7.90 an hour.

Miss Young, a Brooklyn resident and former Chinatown youth worker, entered the plumbers' trainee program under a city-industry plan to bring more minority group members into the building trades.

She was declared eligible after officials amended the definition of minorities to include women.

Under the auspices of the City Employment department and Plumbers Local Union No. 1, Miss Young was placed on a construction job site in Queens Borough.

"I've been doing mostly light work on the job," said the 5-foot-4-inch, 110-pound Miss Young.

Has she had any trouble with her co-workers in the male-dominated craft?

"No, not really," she said. "Everyone has been wonderful and very helpful."

We're very picky about your suit.

We have to be. If we didn't maintain the highest standards in the drycleaning business, we wouldn't qualify to be a Santone drycleaner.

So not only will we get your suit really clean, we'll reshape it properly, remove spots and stains and that deep-down, unseen soil. We'll be very picky about the little things, too.

Like replacing missing or broken buttons. Making sure your linings are wrinkle-free. Rolling lapels. Preventing double creases and button impressions. Unsticking sticky zippers. And resewing split seams or loose cuffs.

We believe it's taking care of the little things like these that help you to look your best.

And when you look good, we look good.

Poll: Congress Rated Negative

... Impeachment Actions Lauded

By LOUIS HARRIS
Although 59% of the American people give the congressional impeachment proceedings high marks, the overall standing of Congress remains negative with the public by a margin of 54-38%. The public is basically looking for some initiative from Congress in controlling inflation and in bringing the economy out of its slump. Up to now it has found such action largely lacking.

The overall rating of Congress was measured in a survey of a nationwide cross section of 1,527 households conducted earlier this month, in which people were asked:

"How would you rate the job Congress is doing this year — excellent, pretty good, only fair or poor?"

OVERALL RATING OF CONGRESS
	Not Sure	Negative	Positive
Sept., 1974	38	54	8
July	29	64	7
June	21	69	10
1973	38	45	17
1972	26	63	11
1971	24	54	12
1970	46	46	8
1969	38	55	7
1968	49	42	9
1967	64	26	10
1966	64	26	10
1965	39	33	8
1964	33	60	7

Since January, the number of people who give Congress a good-excellent (positive) job rating has nearly doubled from 21% to 38%. However, a persistent majority of 54% continues to be critical of the congressional performance this year.

The Harris Survey has measured public reaction to Congress every year since 1963, and only in the period of 1964-1967 did a plurality or majority of the public give a positive assessment of the House and Senate. Back then, of course, a Democratic Congress had a honeymoon with newly elected President Lyndon Johnson and passed a spate of legislation in the areas of social and human rights.

Over most of the past 10 years, the public has viewed Congress as having no better than a mediocre to poor record. It was during this period that the executive power of the White House was growing, chiefly at the expense of Congress.

One of the most significant developments of 1974 was the reassertion of congressional power. But these latest results show that the public feels Congress still has a long way to go to redress the balance between the legislative and

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

By SIDNEY OMARR

Forecast For Monday

The Gemini of Chad Everett and Susan Strassberg appeals to me: When I talked to them about astrology they displayed intellectual curiosity and contributed constructive suggestions and asked provocative questions. Gemini is the teacher, the one who expresses, asks and strives gallantly to come up with answers.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): If you insist on hanging on to outmoded methods, be prepared to pay the price. Key now is to know how and when to let go. Let the past be. Welcome the future. Get rid of burden you should not have been carrying in first place!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You may find that what you seek is nebulous. Means seek more direct means of communication. If you have been skirting issues, stop, look and listen. You do best by coming to terms — mainly with yourself.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Bright spot emerges among mass of red tape and general confusion. Call, message or news from relative creates a more cheerful atmosphere. Be receptive — and insist that you be treated as such.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Bright appears as if from nowhere. A friend proves friendship and you feel warm all over. Emotional security blanket is present and lost feeling says bye-bye. You will be happier in domestic situation and one who cares will show it and you will love it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your cycle is such that you have universal appeal. Means more persons become favorable toward you. Aries, Libra individuals figure in picture. Finish, complete and find ways to advertise, publicize and distribute.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Friends and money may be like oil and water — they will not mix. Know it and save yourself grief. State your case and assume responsibility. But don't attempt to juggle, to confuse apples and oranges. One who means plenty to you will not have to be placated with false flattery.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Cycle is high and you are due for promotion, elevation of standing in community. You get chance now to get views across, to feel pulse of public and to make known your views in definite, dynamic manner.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Subtle nuances dominate. You are getting ready to leave the old and to begin anew. Leo and Aries/Aquarius figure prominently. You are facing somewhat of a dilemma. Key is to make intelligent compromise without abandoning basic principles.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You may feel as if you are standing in quicksand. Key is to tread lightly. Go halfway with those holding opposite views. Your best course now is conciliation, more so than in recent past. Aquarius is in picture.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are inquisitive, restless, artistic, romantic. Gemini, Virgo and Pisces persons play important roles in your life. This is your "big year." Important and productive and September should be a memorable month. If single, you marry. If married, you add to family. Married or single, you invest in your abilities and go into business for yourself.

San Francisco — An overcast day by the bay but good news for garlic lovers. (But will anyone love a garlic lover? That is the question, Max.)

Anyway, health food people recently found out garlic is good for colds and high blood pressure. So it also helps you if you have stomach ulcers. That's what the health magazine said. So tuck in a few cloves and relax.

For many years I gobbled carrots. I don't care much for carrots. But as every fool knows, they are a prime source of Vitamin A.

Eat carrots and you can see in the dark. See forever. That was the word when I ate carrots.

Attend now to the American Medical Association:

"More than half the people in the U.S. have eye trouble, but eating carrots will not improve their vision."

Oh, yes. I ate spinach, too. "It makes you good and strong. It is full of iron," said grandma. I loathed it. But I ate it.

It turns out now it is also full of rocks. It can give you kidney stones. Good luck, Popeye the sailor ma-a-an!

If you eat olives and celery, chances are you have a higher than average IQ.

I you eat grapefruit, too, you're a genius. Anyway, you were not behind the door when the brains were passed out.

This is the latest discovery by science after a long and happy study of olive and celery and grapefruit eaters.

Autumn blows around each windy corner now ("Come to Jamaica!" say the warm ads in the slick magazines.) It is vitamin weather.

At least it used to be vitamin weather. Used to be I took vitamins in this kind of weather and felt fortified thereby. Then I read a piece in the health magazine: "The use of vitamins is probably a harmless self-deception since our diets provide the small quantities needed daily."

The north wind doth blow and we shall have snow. I take good care of myself. I even spread margarine thinly. Wouldn't touch butter.

No, sir. The medics all said: "Butter and other animal fats are the major source of cholesterol." (I used to have to look up how to spell that. Now I just roll it off. Shows what concern can do to you.)

Anyway, I knocked off butter. Kept the old ticker ticking in waltz time.

Alas, the health people now say it is not butter. It is sugar that sends you off. DOA on the hospital blotter. I've been pouring sugar down. Probably right now a mere shell.

Thus scientists blow down my dream scatters. Make me stop self-deception — and I was a gay deceiver. Happy as could be.

Made me stop sweetening the coffee. Carrots? Forget it! Look back on a wasted rocky life of spinach. And almost convinced me to stop breathing. At least not gulp it in.

What Do Many Doctors Use When They Suffer Pain And Itch Of Hemorrhoidal Tissues?
Exclusive formula gives prompt, temporary relief from such pain and itch in many cases. Helps shrink swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues due to inflammation.
News about a most effective medication comes from a recent survey of doctors. Asked what they themselves use to relieve such painful symptoms, many of the doctors reporting named one particular medication they either use themselves or in their office practice.
This medication gives prompt relief for hours in many cases from pain and itching of hemorrhoidal tissues. And it actually helps shrink swelling of such tissues caused by infection. Tests by doctors showed this to be true.
The medication used was Preparation H® — the same exclusive formula you can buy at any drug counter without a prescription. Try doctor-tested Preparation H. There's no other formula like it. At drug counters everywhere. Ointment or suppositories.

Injuries Plague Northwestern, NU

By BOB OWENS
Star Sports Editor

A couple of crippled football teams will be battling Saturday in Memorial Stadium when Nebraska tries to get back on the winning path against winless Northwestern.

The Cornhuskers, beaten 21-30 by Wisconsin in just one of a jillion upsets in college football Saturday, definitely will have to play without I-back John O'Leary, who has a hairline fracture of his jaw and they may also be without quarterback Dave Humm.

Northwestern, on the other hand, apparently will be forced to start a third-string quarterback following injuries to starter Mitch Anderson, who has a possible shoulder separation, and No. 2 signal-caller Kim Girkins, who suffered a hip pointer.

"We finished the game with our fourth quarterback," coach John Pont said of his team's 49-3 loss to Notre Dame. "We held out Steve Moor, who is our No. 3 quarterback, because we wanted to be sure he would be healthy to play against Nebraska."

Moor is a 6-3, 195-pound junior who Pont said he had been planning to redshirt. "Now we have to play him."

O'Leary's loss, coupled with the probable absence of Humm, who has a hip pointer (which is a deep bruise), puts a lot of importance on the Huskers' practices this week.

O'Leary suffered the fracture on a six-yard scoring plunge through left tackle near the end of the first half. After an examination, he returned briefly in the fourth quarter and wound up Nebraska's leading ball carrier with 86 yards in 17 carries. That was his second best afternoon as a Husker, topped only by his 100-yard day in 17 carries last season against Kansas State.

Trainer Paul Schneider said O'Leary definitely will be out of action for four weeks. He had his jaw wired shut Sunday afternoon. He will be able to attend practices and run to keep in condition and Schneider said he even could play "but we're keeping his own goodwill in mind" by holding him out.

Schneider said recovery from a hip pointer takes from seven to ten days normally and that Humm will be given an "awful lot of treatment" this week.

Humm's absence through most of the last three quarters showed his importance to the NU offense. He's almost "the franchise" for the Huskers. "Obviously, he's the heart of our passing attack," coach Tom Osborne said in the dressing room after the disappointing loss.

Nebraska had two other minor injuries and the usual bumps and bruises in the fierce struggle. Defensive end Bob Martin with a slight ankle sprain and fullback Tony Davis with a chronic knee strain will get only limited workouts for a couple of days, Schneider reported.

Northwestern scout Ernie Adams, who watched Nebraska against Wisconsin, remarked the Husker performance was "one of the few times I've seen Nebraska play Ohio State type football," which, of course, is emphasis on running.

"Wisconsin has been an underrated team," he said. "They might be the third strongest team in the Big Ten behind Ohio State and Michigan."

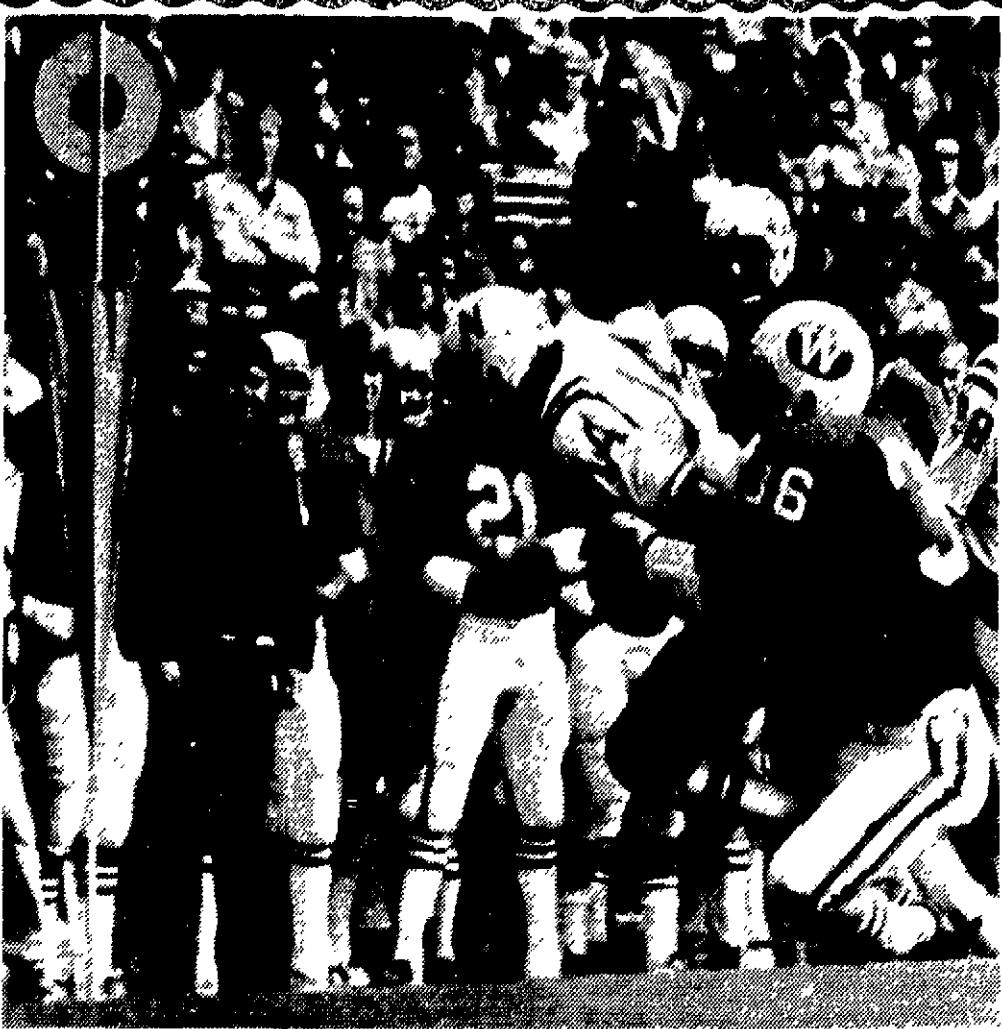

Adams probably was watering at the mouth over the prospect of Northwestern quarterback Anderson throwing against the Nebraska secondary, which didn't bear any resemblance to last year's group which led the nation in pass defense.

At the time, though, he didn't know about the injury to Anderson. Anderson has been the leading passer in the Big Ten for the last two years.

"When they had to run the football they were fairly impressive moving it," Adams said of the NU offense. "And the defense is extremely well coached."

Surprises Main Order Of Day In Pro Football Yankees Retain Lead With Win

By The Associated Press

The home field advantage, a factor in most sports, meant next to nothing in the National Football League Sunday with visiting teams scoring a fistful of victories, including some surprises.

The major upsets came in Cincinnati and Washington, with the home teams on losing end in both games. San Diego, which won only two games all of last season, stung Cincinnati's defending American Conference Central Division champions 20-17. Washington, a perennial playoff team, was embarrassed at home by St. Louis 17-10.

Other home losers were Atlanta, which dropped a 16-10 decision to San Francisco; Buffalo, downed 24-16 by Miami; Detroit, which lost to Minnesota, 7-6; the New York Giants, beaten 28-20 by New England; Baltimore, 20-13 losers to Green Bay, and Chicago, which lost to the New York Jets, 23-21.

In other games, it was Cleveland 20, Houston 7; Los Angeles 24, New Orleans 0; Oakland 27, Kansas City 7; and Pittsburgh 35, Denver 35 in a tie game that produced the first overtime of the regular season.

Dallas plays at Philadelphia in a nationally televised game Monday night that completes the weekend action.

Cincinnati hadn't lost at home since December 1972, but the Chargers ended that streak when quarterback Dan Fouts capped a 98-yard fourth quarter march by plunging into the end zone for San Diego's winning touchdown.

The victory, only the second for the Chargers since midway through last season, was clinched when Horst Muhlmann missed a 34-yard field goal with 77 seconds left to play.

Washington was stung on a pair of long touchdowns two minutes apart as St. Louis sprung its upset.

First, defensive end Ron Yankowski scooped up a fumble and raced 71 yards for a Cardinal touchdown. Then Terry Metcalf went 75 yards for another score.

The Redskins tried to come back and had first and goal on the St. Louis 10 late in the game. Bill Kilmer threw three incomplete passes and then safety Jim Tolbert intercepted the fourth one, preserving the victory.

Turnovers proved Atlanta's undoing against San Francisco. Skip Vanderbunt and Jimmy Johnson both picked off Falcon passes in the game's first five minutes, setting up the touchdowns that gave the 49ers their victory.

Joe Reed threw a 13-yard pass to Dan Abramowicz for one score and Larry Schreiber's one-yard plunge produced the other.

Chuck Foreman ran 11 yards for the game's only touchdown, but that proved to be enough for Minnesota against Detroit.

The Vikings made Foreman's second-quarter score stand up despite losing two fumbles to the Lions and having a punt blocked. Errol Mann's two field goals provided the only Detroit points.

Miami bounced back from last week's opening game loss to defeat Buffalo with Bob Griese throwing two touchdown passes, striking after the Dolphins' alert defense had recovered a pair of fumbles.

Doug Swift recovered an O. J. Simpson fumble on the one, setting up Griese's scoring pitch to Jim Mandich, and Jake Scott covered a Jim Braxton fumble, leading to a three-yard TD pass to Marv Fleming.

New England, which kayoed the Dolphins last week, came right back to defeat the New York Giants with Jim Plunkett hurling three touchdown passes.

Running backs Mack Herron and Sam Cunningham each caught one of Plunkett's scoring passes and also combined for 150 rushing yards between them.

MacArthur Lane scored two TDs and Green Bay stood off a late Baltimore rally to defeat the Colts. Chester Marcol kicked two field goals for the Packers, one from 39 yards and the other a club record-tying 52 yards.

A crowd of 41,252, smallest in 13 years at Baltimore, saw the Colts finally end a string of 17 consecutive quarters without a TD when they scored in the final period on Bert Jones' five-yard scoring pass to Bill Olds.

Bobby Howfield's 39-yard field goal lifted the Jets to their victory over Chicago after New York had nearly blown an early 20-point lead.

Joe Namath's passing had helped the Jets to three quick TDs but the Bears bounced back and were trailing 20-14 when Howfield, who had missed an extra point kick earlier, booted the clinching field goal.

Cleveland capitalized on Houston errors, converting three turnovers into 17 points en route to a come-from-behind victory over the Oilers.

Thom Darden's interception set up a Don Cockcroft field goal in the first period for the Browns. After the Oilers went ahead, Jerry Shark recovered a Vic Washington fumble, setting up Cleveland's first touchdown, scored by Greg Pruitt.

Another interception, this one by Bo Scott, led to Mike Phipps' five-yard scoring pass for the final Browns' score.

Joe Gilliam rallied Pittsburgh three second half touchdowns, producing the tie against Denver.

The deadlock stood up through a scoreless 15-minute overtime, the first regular season extra period in the history of the NFL.

Gilliam completed 31 of 50 passes for 348 yards and one touchdown.

John Hadl tossed a pair of touchdown passes and Los Angeles' defense shut out New Orleans.

Hadl hit Jack Snow on a 30-yard TD and Harold Jackson for a five-yard score while the Rams' defense sacked Saints' quarterback Archie Manning five times.

Lawrence McCutcheon rushed for 102 yards for Los Angeles.

Ken Stabler pitched three touchdown passes, moving Oakland past Kansas City.

Dave Casper caught two of Stabler's TD passes and Mike Siani grabbed the other.

Upsets Dominate College Football

By BOB OWENS
Star Sports Editor

Saturday, Sept. 21, 1974, could go down in history as the biggest day for upsets college football has seen in a long, long time, perhaps the most ever.

It also might be the day that the Big Eight Conference suddenly became just another conference and one on which the Big Ten returned to nationwide respectability.

Guy's like Jimmy "The Greek" Snyder and other handicappers really guessed wrong — not only on which team would win, but at least 19 teams that were considered strong enough to give points in wagering around the country actually lost.

The biggest upset was Navy's 7-6 victory over Penn State, which was a 24-point favorite. Likewise stunning was UCLA, a 20-point choice but a 21-10 loser to previously winless Iowa.

Other equally shocking upsets included Nebraska by Wisconsin after being favored by 17; Oklahoma State's 26-7 win over Arkansas; Texas A&M's 21-14 bopping of Louisiana State in the Bengal Tigers' own backyard; Florida 17-10 over 14th ranked Maryland; Miami of Florida 20-3 over ranked Houston; and Illinois, a 41-7 winner over Stanford, also a ranked team.

About the only positive thing that emerged from Big Eight action on far-flung gridirons was Oklahoma State's jolting of Arkansas, which a week previously had kayoed Southern California.

Missouri and Kansas State were the only other league teams able to win while Iowa State, Kansas and Colorado in addition to Nebraska were beaten. Oklahoma was idle.

Iowa State's loss to Washington, 31-20, was in the upset category as the Cyclones had been favored by eight points. Colorado didn't score in losing to Michigan, 31-0, and all Kansas got was a field goal in a 17-3 loss to Tennessee.

The so-called "Little Eight" of the Big Ten rose up and made most of the noise in that conference as Michigan and Ohio State continued to be impressive.

Iowa's victory was by far the most surprising as Rob Fick, who didn't play last year, threw two touchdown passes and engineered a 91-yard scoring drive in the fourth quarter to stun UCLA.

Turnovers played a big part in Navy's surprise over Penn State and helped tremendously in Oklahoma State's big win.

Penn State lost five of its seven fumbles and missed four field goal attempts in losing for the first time at home since 1970.

On the other hand, Oklahoma State's Abby Daigle kicked field goals of 21, 27, 33 and 23 yards as the Cowboys upset Arkansas.

Among other upsets were Holy

"Offensively we never regained our poise after the first series when we fumbled the ball," Razorback coach Frank Broyles said. "Their three men in the middle of the defensive line were too strong for us. We couldn't cut off the linebackers when we tried to run wide and we couldn't get to them to block them when we ran in the middle."

Miami's Hurricanes overcame four lost fumbles with short touchdown runs and two field goals while holding Houston's vaunted Veer-T offense to 238 yards overall.

Among other upsets were Holy Cross over Brown 45-10 after Brown had been a three-point favorite; Colorado State over Florida State 14-7; Duke over South Carolina 20-14, after which coach Paul Dietzel of the Gamecocks announced he was resigning effective at the end of the season; West Virginia over Kentucky 16-3; Cincinnati over Rice 28-21; Memphis State over Mississippi (conqueror of Missouri last week), 15-7; and Mississippi State over Georgia 38-14.

The only encouraging note on an otherwise discouraging day for Nebraska football fans was that Oregon, 61-7 loser to NU in the opener, bounced back to whip Air Force 27-23.

'Hurt' Kuwamoto Leads Links To No. 9 Ranking

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

Last Friday afternoon, just before Lincoln High's football team boarded its bus in Ogallala, Ralph Kuwamoto was walking on crutches.

That night in Scottsbluff, the senior Lincoln High quarterback rushed for 133 yards on 16 carries and scored a touchdown in the Links' 27-14 victory. The win kept Lincoln High unbeaten and earns the Links the No. 9 spot in this week's Class A ratings.

"He sprained his ankle halfway through practice last Wednesday," Lincoln High football coach Jerry Ball said of Kuwamoto. "We had him on crutches all day Thursday and part of Friday until we walked around Scottsbluff Friday afternoon. He wasn't at full speed against Scottsbluff, but he sure contributed his part."

Kuwamoto's gritty performance sparked Lincoln High to a comeback victory. Scottsbluff had scored a pair of touchdowns before the game was even four minutes old.

"I got a little upset when I looked up at the clock and we were behind 14-0 with 8:20 still left in the first quarter," admits Ball.

Ralph Kuwamoto
Lincoln High Quarterback

"But I also knew if we started to play our kind of football, we were going to win. Kuwamoto helped us do that," noted Ball, whose team dropped from sixth to ninth in the ratings.

"When you fall behind two touchdowns like that and have run only one offensive play (a fumble), it could have been easy to get down and start writing the game off to the 400-mile trip," acknowledged Ball.

"But we roared back and that's a compliment to our players. An average team could have folded under similar circumstances, but they were determined to win," added Ball.

The close-knit Links, rebounding from back-to-back losing seasons, hope to boost their ratings stock Friday night with an intra-city game against fourth-ranked Lincoln Northeast.

Ball believes the Northeast challenge may have hurt his team against Scottsbluff. "I think we were looking a week ahead. We took Scottsbluff a little lightly," he admits.

He points out, however, that "Scottsbluff was difficult to prepare for because we had no idea what they would run offensively since their quarterback (Andy Fitzmorris) had been hurt the week before.

"We knew Wishbone had been put in mainly for him. So, with him out, we thought they might go to either the Veer or Wing-T," notes Ball. "We prepared for all three."

The Scottsbluff trip "was a good experience for our kids overall," according to Ball. "Three of them had made it two years ago. A lot of our kids hadn't seen Western Nebraska before. The scenery was quite impressive."

Arriving back in Lincoln shortly before 8 o'clock Saturday morning was no highlight though, Ball assures.

The Links expect to be 100 per cent physically for the first time this season against Northeast. The two teams battled to a scoreless tie last year.

Cardinals Nip Chicago, 6-5

By United Press International

Ted Simmons' run-scoring single with two out in the bottom of the ninth and Al Hrabosky's air-tight relieving lifted St. Louis to a 6-5 decision Sunday over the Chicago Cubs.

The victory, which went to Hrabosky who raised his record to 8-1 with two innings of perfect relief, enlarged the Cardinals' lead in the Eastern Division of the National League to 1 1/2 games over Pittsburgh.

Lou Brock ignited the last inning rally with a base hit and went to second when Reggie Smith worked a walk from Cub loser Dave LaRoche. With two out, Simmons rifled a shot up the middle scoring Brock with the winning run. It was Simmons' fourth RBI of the game.

In other games New York blanked Pittsburgh 4-0, Los Angeles edged San Diego 6-5, San Francisco topped Cincinnati 6-0, Philadelphia beat Montreal 3-2 before losing 8-5 in the second game of a doubleheader, and Houston edged Atlanta 3-2 in 14 innings.

Jon Matlack fired a three-hitter and knocked in two runs to give the Mets their second straight victory over the Pirates. Matlack allowed only three infield singles enroute to his 13th victory against 13 losses. It was his first win over Pittsburgh this year in four decisions.

The Mets scored the only run they needed in the first inning when Felix Millan singled, took second on a walk and came home on John Milner's two-out double.

Dave Lopes cracked a three-run home run in the second inning and Joe Ferguson added two more runs with a sixth inning home run to lift Los Angeles over the Padres and reduced the Dodgers' magic number for the National League West title to five.

Mike Marshall pitched the ninth for the Dodgers allowing two runs but setting major league records of 100 appearances and 79 games finished during a season.

The Dodgers' 14th triumph over San Diego in 15 meetings this season enabled them to move 4 1/2 games in front of Cincinnati in the N.L. West.

Lopes capped a four-run second inning with his ninth homer of the year off Bill Greif, just inside the foul pole in left with Ron Cey and Bill Russell on board with walks. Pinch-hitter Von Joshua drove in the first run of the inning with a sacrifice fly. Ferguson, with Willie Crawford on base with a single, connected for his 10th homer of the year into the left field pavillion.

John Montefusco pitched a seven-hitter and hit his second major league homer as the Giants beat a k e d Cincinnati. Dave Kingman hit his 17th homer and Chris Speier his ninth for the other big blows in the Giants' 11-hit attack.

Willie Davis went 4-for-4 at the plate and drove in three runs in the second game as the Expos earned a split of their doubleheader with Philadelphia.

In the opener, Jim Lonborg pitched six innings to improve his record to 16-12. Jay Johnstone drove in two runs with a first inning triple. Willie Montanez singled home the first run as the Phillies scored all their runs in the first inning off Montreal loser Steve Rogers, 14-21.

Pinch-hitter Tom Griffin lined a one-out single to score Larry Milbourne from second base with the winning run in the 14th inning to help the Astros down Atlanta. Milbourne singled to right field with one out in the 14th and moved to second on Bob Watson's single. Griffin, a pitcher, pinch-hit for reliever Ken Forsch, and drove in the decisive run.

By United Press International

Bobby Murcer's second home run in two days and the combined four-hit pitching of Pat Dobson and Sparky Lyle Sunday enabled New York to edge the Cleveland Indians 2-1, insuring the Yankees of retaining undisputed possession of first place in the American League East.

Murcer, unable to connect for a homer at Shea Stadium until Saturday, poled his 10th of the season with two out in the sixth inning off rookie southpaw Bruce Ellingsen to snap a 1-1 tie. Ellingsen, making his first major league start, had allowed only two hits prior to Murcer's blast over the right centerfield fence.

The Yanks, hitless for the first three innings, tied the score 1-1 in the fourth. Elliott Maddox led off with a walk and moved to second on a single by Murcer. Lou Piniella fouled out to first baseman Tom McCraw in short right field and Maddox was able to tag up and move to third, from where he scored on Thurman Munson's sacrifice fly.

In other games Baltimore ripped Boston 7-2, Texas edged Kansas City 4-3, Chicago tripped Oakland 3-1, Detroit nipped Milwaukee 6-5, and Minnesota topped California 6-2.

Boog Powell homered and singled twice to drive in three runs as Baltimore defeated the Red Sox and remained one game behind New York in the AL East.

Mike Cuellar went the distance for his 21st win against 10 losses, scattering eight hits.

Powell singled home one run in the first, hit his 11th homer into the Baltimore bullpen in right in the third and singled in the fifth after Bobby Grich doubled.

The Orioles scored three runs in the first. Rich Coggins walked to open the game and scored on Paul Blair's double. Blair came home on Powell's looper to right center and the big first baseman later scored on a Brooks Robinson hit.

Ferguson Jenkins equalled his best single season winning total in the majors by capturing his 24th victory as he pitched the Rangers over Kansas City.

The Rangers managed only five hits but cashed in on some faulty Kansas City fielding for a three-run sixth inning that broke up a 1-1 game.

Jenkins, who has lost 12, also won 24 games as well as the Cy Young award in 1971 with the Chicago Cubs. He gave up seven hits, walked none and struck out five.

Veteran southpaw Jim Kaat, walking none and striking out 10, picked up his fifth consecutive win by hurling the White Sox over the A's with a sparkling five-hitter.

Kaat, who earned his 19th win against 13 losses, moved to within one of the 2,000 strikeout mark with his season's high. It marked the first time since June, 1972 that the Sox were able to capture a season series from Oakland.

Reggie Sanders drove in four runs to lead the Tigers over Milwaukee.

Al Kaline singled to left field in the seventh inning for his 2,999th major league hit.

Sanders doubled home the Tigers' first run in the first, hit a two-run homer in the sixth and singled in a run in the seventh.

Steve Brye slugged four hits to lead an 11-hit Minnesota attack and help the Twins to their victory over California. Brye had two doubles and two singles in four at-bats.

LA, Lake Placid Get OK On Bids

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI) — Los Angeles and Lake Placid, N.Y., which hosted the 1932 Olympics, were given the go-ahead Sunday by the U.S. Olympic Committee's board of directors to bid for the 1980 Olympic games.

The cities will name their presentations Oct. 23 at Vienna. Los Angeles will compete against Moscow for the summer games and Lake Placid, N.Y., against Vancouver, Canada, for the winter event.

Donald D. Lorenzen, a Los Angeles councilman, said that while the city expects to sponsor the games without a subsidy, it expects "to come out ahead" if it gets the nod. However, the Soviet capital has been given the inside track.

John Shea, a supervisor from Lake Placid, said his city has a long record of "expertise, experience and good reputation" in hosting international sports events, and that the 1932 winter games there were a success.

| 4—Lincoln Northeast (2-0) | 9—Lincoln High (3-0) |
| 5—Lincoln East (3-0) | 10—Hastings (2-1) |

Comment — Omaha Ryan advances from ninth to sixth for 21-12 win over Omaha Roncalli. Hastings stays in top 10 despite 16-6 loss to Lincoln East. Other 2-1 teams considered were Grand Island, Norfolk, Omaha Burke and Omaha Gross. Creighton Prep and Roncalli are strong candidates even with 1-2 records. Friday's Lincoln Northeast-Lincoln High game and Saturday's Lincoln Southeast-Hastings game top week's card.

Corpses Rotting As Toll Rises

CHOLOMA, Honduras (AP) — The stench from rotting corpses of half the population of this northern Honduras town filled the air Sunday.

Rescue teams found body after body as they pried through shattered remains of the few houses left recognizable as such. The official count was 2,760 confirmed dead in the town that a few days earlier had 5,000 to 7,000 inhabitants. The rubble was expected to hold dozens more bodies.

Choloma was buried by a wall of water, earth and rocks on Thursday when an earthen dam burst during the height of the storm's fury along Honduras' Caribbean coast.

In the middle of one collapsed house, an 18-year-old Red Cross worker, accompanied by correspondents, pulled up a plywood board and discovered a man's rotting body.

The Red Cross worker, Rigoberto Saldívar, his face masked to ward off the smell, poured gasoline over the corpse. He picked up a twig, lit a match to it and threw it on the body, which shot up in flames.

About 100 people, covering their noses and mouths, gasped as the flames consumed the corpse. The scene was repeated over and over in the shattered town.

Dozens of Hondurans who survived the hurricane described how floodwaters from the Rio Choloma inundated their houses, sweeping like an angry serpent through the stone structures with thatched roofs.

Gladys Argentina Pego, 14, stood looking at piles of twigs, stones and boards that once were her home.

"I spent five hours in a tree waiting for the water to go down before I was able to flee to the school to safety," she said.

Jose Santora Rivera, 25, a packing-house employee, said that after getting his family to safety he tried to help save others. He said he saw one boy who was being swept along by the flood grab a duck to hold him afloat.

"The duck started flapping its wings, which brought the boy next to a tree. He grabbed the branches and saved his life," Santora said.

"People were very afraid to leave their homes," he continued. "I saw nine persons from one family embrace each other. They were afraid to move. They died holding each other in their arms."

A blind man, Trinidad Chacon Guarite, said he fled from his house when the water started sweeping through it, luckily found some trees and spent 12 hours in the branches before he was rescued.

"I also saved two children who held onto my hand as I was stumbling around," the blind man said.

Choloma straddles both sides of the Rio Choloma. The area of greatest destruction was along the river's banks.

Government relief workers said some of the sturdier houses were swept more than a mile downstream, finally to rest one atop the other.

Choloma is about 185 miles north of Tegucigalpa, the capital, and about 10 miles north of San Pedro Sula. Government emergency committee workers say the dam that burst apparently was weakened by 12-foot tides that pushed flood waters back up the Choloma River valley.

Americans Send Aid To Honduras

By The Associated Press

As many American church and civic groups began drives for food, clothing and medical supplies, the American Red Cross dispatched disaster specialists to Honduras Sunday to help survivors of Hurricane Fifi.

The full extent of the disaster was unknown, but officials said 5,000 were confirmed dead and 150,000 were homeless in what the League of Red Cross societies in Geneva termed one of the worst catastrophes in Central American history.

Roman Catholic Archbishop Coleman Carroll of Miami issued an appeal for donations of canned goods and other supplies to be taken to any Catholic church in southern Florida and said a special collection for survivors would be taken at services next Sunday.

The Archdiocese of Miami set up a special Honduran relief office to handle donations.

Miami Spanish-language radio station WQBA reported it received $15,000 in the first few hours after issuing an appeal for donations, with most of the money coming from the city's large Cuban population.

The station also said it sent 14 truckloads of canned food and medicine to Miami International Airport, where TAN, the Honduran national airline, said it would fly the material to Honduras.

The U.S. Agency for International Development's Office of Foreign Disaster Relief Coordination said the military was authorized to send water purification units, 7,000 blankets, medical supplies, transportation equipment and medical and survey teams to Honduras.

"Right now, their biggest problem is survey, and that is what we are trying to do," said spokesman Karl Mahler. "We are trying to respond to the confirmed needs as relayed by the Honduran government."

He said the United States has

LOADING SUPPLIES . . . donations sent from Miami.

received no official request for aid from the Honduran government.

U.S. Red Cross officials said Americans who want to help with relief work should send fund contributions to local Red Cross chapters marked for Central American hurricane relief.

The Honduran Red Cross said funds are needed for local purchase of supplies and to support its relief program in conjunction with the Honduran emergency relief committee.

Arthur Flynn of Rochester, N.Y., and Enrique Canas of Denver, Colo., were the U.S. Red Cross specialists sent immediately to Honduras. Other staff members will be sent as soon as the specific needs of the disaster victims become known, the organization said.

In Washington, a spokesman for the Honduran Emergency

Fund said initial reports had been received about an outbreak of typhoid in the disaster area.

The spokesman said the public was being asked to donate money for the purchase of medical supplies rather than food or clothing. He said money should be sent to the Honduran Emergency Fund at the Honduran Embassy or to Honduran consulates in New York, Los Angeles, Miami or New Orleans.

He said the specific location or scope of the reported typhoid outbreak was not known.

In New Orleans, the Honduran community began collecting food, bottled water, clothing and medical supplies on Saturday.

"The damage is much worse than we thought two or three days ago," said Alonso Andara, president of the Honduras Association of New Orleans. "There is massive flooding. Much of the country is devastated."

Andara said Standard Fruit Co. of Gulfport, Miss., Honduras SAHSA Airlines and TACA International Airlines offered to transport supplies to the scene.

The Mississippi Hurricane Relief Committee said it would send at least one plane load of supplies to Honduras on Sunday. Gov. Bill Waller appointed James Reese of Gulfport to coordinate the program and urged citizens to contribute money for food, clothing and medical supplies through their local banks.

In Atlanta, Imperial Airways set up several relief centers during the weekend, and donations of medical supplies, food and clothing were flown to Miami Saturday night to be picked up by Honduran planes.

"The turnout and the response was just tremendous. We were very pleased, and the calls are still coming in," said Carolyn Purvis, spokeswoman for the charter aircraft service.

Martha Causes Ruckus

LONDON (AP) — Martha Mitchell caused a ruckus Sunday at a London airport when she refused to submit to a routine security check, an official of British Airways reported.

The official said Mrs. Mitchell "was shouting and refused to be touched by one of the security girls. In the end, when we told her she would not be able to fly if she was not searched, she calmed down, and we used an electronic device to search her."

Mrs. Mitchell, the estranged wife of former U.S. Atty. Gen. John Mitchell, boarded a British Airways jumbo jet for New York. She came to London on Thursday for a television appearance.

Enter Exon's aide, Bill Hopper, who proceeded to pass out documents that showed Exon supported the legislation early in the session. That isn't the final irony. The kicker is that Mitchell's news conference was held Sept. 12, and as of Sept. 20, the governor of the State of Nebraska still had no official confirmation from Federal Highway Administrator Norbert Tiemann that sanctions had been lifted and that the funds would come through.

A parting note: State Motor Vehicles Director John Sullivan took a light view of the whole thing — he sent Tiemann a stamped self-addressed envelope, along with a note indicating he hoped future communications could reach state officials a bit quicker.

GOP Sources Gripe About Marvel

By EDWARD W. HOWARD
Associated Press Writer

Sources in the Republican Party have begun to complain privately about State Sen. Richard Marvel's handling of his GOP candidacy for governor.

Specifically, they have complained that Marvel's relationship with the media is weak, and that he has been ineffective in presenting his arguments on major issues.

Two GOP sources, one a campaign worker and the other a party official, said Marvel has received recommendations on two occasions about his press coverage.

Both sources asked not to be named.

"He says he doesn't have time to worry about it (media relations)," the party official said. "What concerns me now is that if he loses in a big way, there could be the possibility of crossovers," meaning Republicans who would vote the straight Democratic ticket, and thus hurt other strong Republican candidates.

Trouble Finding Marvel
A campaign worker noted complaints from newsmen that they sometimes have trouble finding Marvel when they want his reaction to some development, such as a statement by Democratic incumbent Gov. J. James Exon, or some story from Washington with possible impact on Nebraska.

"The guy is unbelievable," the party worker said. "He works hard, there's no question about that, but this campaign is just unbelievable."

The chief complaint from reporters, both men acknowledged, was that it often takes hours to locate Marvel and that on occasion, phone calls to his headquarters reveal his campaign staff isn't sure where he is.

Despite worry over the Marvel campaign, both sources said they thought Marvel stood a good chance in his effort to unseat Exon.

Then, there's the story about the GOP official who complained about a column several months ago.

Marvel would have scored his finesse, save for what apparently was a slip of the tongue. He said Exon
